Army Seeks To Put U. S. On Virtual War Footing

Department Expected To Ask Authority to Send Troops Abroad, Keep Guard on Duty

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The War Department plans to ask Congress to make a formal declaration of a national emergency, a step that would put the Nation on a virtual war status and make it possible for troops to be sent anywhere in the world.

President Roosevelt, it was learned last night, has approved the Army's plan to keep the National Guard and Reserves in active service beyond their year of service, a step that requires action by Congress. Army chiefs want to accomplish this by a Congressional declaration of national emergency.

Retention of the Guard and Reserves could be authorized by a simple resolution passed by Congress, it is said, but the declaration of an emergency would invoke other powers applicable in wartime. Selectees, for example, may be kept in active service beyond their year of service only when "Congress declares that the national interest is imperilled."

Such a declaration would also remove restrictions on the use of Guardsmen and selectees outside the Western Hemisphere and American possessions. Practically all other war powers not applicable under a Presidential declaration of a national emergency would come into effect should Congress make the declaration.

Protest Storm Forecast

The request, when made, is expected to raise a storm of protest among opponents of the Administration's foreign policy, and War Department heads plan to confer with Senate and House leaders before formally presenting their proposal. Should the latter indicate that sentiment in Congress would be opposed to the move, it may be restricted, perhaps, to specifically authorize retention of the Guard, Reserves and selectees, and cover other specified war powers.

Earlier in the day, the War Department formally asked Congress for authority to weed out unfit Army officers without delay and inaugurated a new system of promotions by selection instead of seniority.

In a far-reaching effort to bring

5-Cent Milk Sales Increase; It Doesn't Help the Gibbses

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

David Miller, District director of surplus commodities in the Department of Public Welfare, volunteered the statement yesterday that increasing sale of low-cost milk is attributable in large measure to recent daily articles in The Post calling attention to the program.

Up to June 24, sales of nickel quarts totaled 60,248 this month, far above average, Miller declared.

A particularly encouraging development, he said, is that in the last few weeks there has been a rush for milk cards by reliefers and jobless persons certified for WPA jobs who were eligible to buy the low-priced milk but who had not bothered to apply for their ration tickets.

All this, however, provides little comfort to families like the Gibbses. Five small children in their home, over a restaurant across from the Government Printing Office, and not a drop of milk in the house.

It is the misfortune of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gibbs and their youngsters, aged 3 to 13, to fall in that class which is not permitted to buy nickel

Matrimonial Bonds Rise

Draft Boards Told to Review Married Men Listed as 1-A National Selective Service headquarters yesterday instructed the Nation's local boards to reconsider immediately all cases of married men or men with minor children who have been classified as 1-A in availability for Army duty.

The announcement stated the move stemmed from the fact that "the growing number of men seeking discharge from the Army on dependency grounds unduly burdens the administrative machinery of both the Army and Selective Service System."

Selection officials, commenting on the policy change, declared the instructions, tantamount to an order, "are the closest we can come to saying 'don't draft any more married men.'"

Calling of married men has long been the chief sore point in the draft. Governed by no specific ruling, some local boards have been liberal with dependency deferments while others have been extremely stringent.

The new policy dictates that a registrant who makes "any substantial contribution" to the support of wife or minor children is to be deferred.

The Selective Service instructions do not apply to men already sworn in. The War Department has final jurisdiction in the cases of men seeking discharge for dependency reasons.

However, the soldiers may request the Selective Service System to investigate his claims and recom-

Speak Not of Joy

Nuptial Bliss, China's Sorrows Contend for Heart of Attache

When patriotism in purest definition is mentioned, the very honorable name of Jen Zien Huang becomes something greater than a whisper.

It hinges on something which must be deduced rather than told from such direct and happy evidence as only Huang himself could give. He, being patriotic to a degree transcendent, will not tell it.

THE BRIDE

The crux of this matter is that Huang, who is an attache at the Chinese Embassy, is married now.

He should, according to the laws and customs, be very happy, seeing the world through springtime, and, in truth, he is. He is among the happiest of men; but also he has a sorrow, because his country has terrible troubles. There may be others like him in the foreign establishments here now, men of strong personal bliss, but half robbed of it by the war.

So when reporters, hearing that he was married last week, asked him about it, he said he could not permit himself to speak of such a matter when his country had such troubles. He was telephoned three times, but would not talk of marriage because it would not seem right for him to

A Dramatic Line-Up

James Ralph McKenzie, 21-year-old Negro, was charged with rape and robbery after his identification by women victims at a police line-up last night.

Mrs. Vada Abarca, 26, of 312 Carroll Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., and Miss Katherine Harper, 30, of 1035 Quebec Place Northwest, positively identified the suspect. Both women had previously identified him Thursday while cruising with two detectives at Georgia Avenue and Hobart Place Northwest.

Mrs. Abarca was criminally assaulted and robbed last Tuesday in a cleaning establishment, and Miss Harper, also an employe in a laundry shop, barely escaped a possibly similar fate the following day.

The identification last night was imbued with something of the dramatic. Miss Harper was the first of the two women to arrive. She was led to the line-up room and was seated with a score of detectives, newspapermen and other spectators.

Six Men on Platform

The suspect was then brought out with five other colored men upon a platform, ablaze with floodlights. The atmosphere was tense, no word was spoken. Then Miss Harper leaned toward a detective next to her and whispered something. When the men were taken away, Capt. Ira Keck, acting chief of detectives, asked:

"Did anyone see a man who has attacked or robbed them?"

Miss Harper, without hesitation, replied:

"Yes. I did." Her voice was firm.

Keck called the group of men back to the room and ordered that each one put on a pair of dark sun glasses. Then he asked Miss Harper to identify the suspect. She arose, walked steadily toward McKenzie and put her finger on his chest.

"Are you sure that's the man?" asked Keck.

"Yes."

Identified a Second Time

The suspect gazed at Miss Harper. There was a look of defiance in his eyes, of bravado in his manner. Then he was taken from the room.

A few minutes later Mrs. Abarca arrived. A group of five men, including the suspect, was led to the room. This time they were not

Russians Retreat in Poland, 'Basically Beaten,' Nazis Say; R. A. F. Intensifies Reich Raids

Hitler Losing So Heavily His Advance Amounts to a Defeat, Moscow Claims; Germans, Still Vague About Details, Report Some Thrusts 120 Miles Deep

By the Associated Press

German panzer divisions steadily drove a great triangular wedge into Soviet defenses in northern Poland in a drive toward White Russia today, but the Soviets claimed they inflicted heavy losses on the invaders in savage rearguard fighting, and still were holding fast in the south.

A great German-Soviet tank battle still raged in the Luck area of central Poland, and on the Bessarabian-Rumanian frontier counterattacking Red troops crossed the Danube by night and seized 500 prisoners and much booty, a Soviet communique said.

[Berlin reports from the Eastern Front, according to the United Press, say the mammoth Soviet army is falling apart under the Nazi drive and the enemy is "basically beaten."]

The Red army acknowledged the great German advance in the north on a 250-mile front extending from the area of Siaulai in former Lithuania, down to Vilna and Baranowicze in northern Poland.

Germans Still Withhold Details of Successes

But the Soviets said that in intermittent counterattacks they destroyed 40 more German tanks, seized prisoners and equipment, and overwhelmed a Nazi field headquarters. A German general was killed in this action, they said.

Berlin again was vague and general. The German news service declared that Nazi troops had made a deep wedge in the Russian defense lines at an undisclosed point—the reference might have been to the Russian center—and that an entire Red division of perhaps 15,000 men complete with tanks had been annihilated.

This agency and the radio put out other and similarly undocumented reports of German successes. But Adolf Hitler's field headquarters simply reported his troops "victorious on all fronts," and promised for the third successive day that great news for the German people would be "made known shortly."

In the air war of the West, British bombers intensified their attack on the German-occupied areas, dropping explosives for the seventeenth consecutive night.

Shattering bombs awakened the people on the English side early today as planes dropped fresh loads of bombs in France, across Dover Strait. It was reported the R. A. F. had also heavily pounded military targets in northwest Germany.

[Berlin reported German antiaircraft fire and night pursuit planes shot down 11 British planes when the R. A. F. attempted to fly in over northwest Germany.]

This uninterrupted offensive was highly praised in Moscow—it of course handicapped the Germans in bringing full air power to bear in the East—and Russian sources declared that the Germans already had lost an aggregate of 2,000 planes on the Western front.

120-Mile Advance Admitted by Implication

Moscow's acknowledgement that the Red armies had fallen back in Lithuania and old Poland before two German armored columns seeking to cut off Minsk, the White Russian capital, implied an aggregate German penetration 120 miles deep in Russian territory in that area.

Yet, considerable as was this cumulative thrust, it still had not reached the territory of Russia proper, so far as could be judged.

The Russians retired in the regions of Vilna and Baranowicze, Poland—the latter town some 90 miles southwest of Minsk itself but still 30 miles short of the old Russian border.

They formed new positions somewhere in that general area—whether to the east or west of Baranowicze was not disclosed—and also were pressed back in northern Lithuania in the vicinity of Siauliai by German forces striking northeast toward the Latvian capital of Riga.

Thus, from the available accounts, all the fighting still was in those buffer states which the Soviet had taken over only within the last year or two.

The Germans, apparently responding to the natural suspicion that their communiques were lacking in details by necessity, said roundly that that was not the case. Rather, it was said in Berlin, they were restrained, so as to "withhold valuable information from the enemy." Again it was claimed that all was going precisely on schedule.

Another Bottleneck

Britain Now Lacks Mechanics, U. S. Planes Remain in Crates

Several hundred American-built warplanes, safely shipped to England some time ago through the submarine-infested Atlantic, have been lying in British warehouses still uncrated because of a shortage of skilled technicians to assemble them.

This new bottleneck of the aid-to-Britain plan was disclosed yesterday by a ranking Government official, who declared that the shortage of trained workmen in the aircraft and other arms industries presented as serious a situation as deficiencies in cargo ships and planes.

It is this shortage, exemplified by the inability to assemble needed fighting planes, that motivated President Roosevelt's indorsement of the British drive to recruit skilled American technicians for non-combatant duties in the England. At a press conference on Tuesday, he urged, in effect, young Americans to answer the British plea.

It is not indicated what type of craft the uncrated American planes are, but believed to be they are pursuit ships. The British are understood to have a 100 per cent reserve of the fighters for the protection of the British Isles. Their greatest shortage is in bombers, the larger types of which are flown across the Atlantic and delivered ready for action.

OPM Asks U.S. Build 8 Plants For Aluminum

The OPM last night answered scathing criticism made Thursday by a Senate committee accusing it of having failed to meet a shortage in defense aluminum, by announcing its recommendation for building eight new plants to make the essential defense metal.

The program, which was sent to the Secretary of War by Defense Chiefs William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, calls for an ultimate annual national production of 1,400,000,000 pounds.

The OPM said that the problem of power had been solved and that construction of all eight plants could be started immediately. It was indicated that the Defense Plant Corporation would be asked to finance the new plants, which would be leased to private operators. Although they were not mentioned, it was assumed that the makers would be the Aluminum Co. of America, Reynolds Metal Corporation, and the Bohn Aluminum Co.

Another Conservation Step

Meanwhile, in another step to conserve limited materials and to divert them to defense needs, OPM plans were disclosed to give the second highest blanket priority rating to makers of heavy bomber frames, engines and propellors.

The rating, A-1-2, will give manufacturers of the giant bombing planes first call on all materials, which priority will automatically extend "downstream" to subcontractors. The bomber rating is higher than recent blanket preference given to makers of military aircraft. Other industries which have received the blanket priorities are crane, machine tool, ship and railroad car builders.

The order has not yet been issued, pending revision of certain details, but a preliminary draft has been published.

From the announced locations of the eight new aluminum plants,

Conferees Get Supply Bill For D.C. Today

By Robert De Vore.
Post Staff Writer

The largest District appropriation in history is expected to be given final approval by Congress today, barring delaying controversy not foreseen by its handlers last night.

It took the Senate about 30 minutes yesterday to pass a $54,785,686 measure to provide the city government with funds for the fiscal year starting Tuesday.

House and Senate conferees will meet at 10 a. m. today in the Senate Appropriations Committee room to settle differences over the appropriation for the District.

Overton Expects Action

"If we can sign them up in conference I will offer the conference report to the Senate at once and I expect, in that event, we shall get final action before adjournment," said Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, who as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee heads Senate conferees.

Representative George H. Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, Appropriations Subcommittee chairman and head of House conferees, declared he would ask House concurrence in the conference agreement immediately, and that he fully expected conferees would agree today.

The two Houses are $2,238,605 apart by reason of Senate additions to the bill. The Senate passed the measure as it was reported by the Appropriations Committee except for addition of $2,600 to provide for a full-time dentist in the Health Department's dental clinic. Senator Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, offered the amendment.

In a brief statement, Senator Overton declared that while the appropriation bill was the largest in history for the District, "I am happy to state that there still remains a credit reserve of $500,000 and an estimated surplus of $85,000."

More for Improvements

He pointed out that the bill provides, in round numbers, $7,000,000 for capital improvements in Washington, $2,000,000 over 1941. He added that many capital improvements are needed in Washington, but that the committee lacked funds to provide more adequately.

As passed by the Senate, the bill is $4,338,081 over the 1941 appropriation and $988,105 higher than estimates. Principal Senate increases were:

Over Our Shoulder

a preview of the Sunday Post

ARE you puzzled by the latest war development—the Nazi attack on Russia? Then we commend the Sunday Post to your attention. Section II will consist almost entirely of material which will help you understand what is happening and why.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC MAP OF RUSSIA

A special map of South Russia and the Middle East, with an accompanying short article, has been prepared for Sunday's Post by the National Geographic Society. The map includes all of the Ukraine, the Black Sea, most of the Caspian Sea region with the Baku oil fields, all of Turkey, the eastern Mediterranean and the Bible lands. The article explains the A-B-C of the economic importance of the Ukraine. A full page in Section II of Sunday's Post.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS BY BARNET NOVER

Why did Hitler invade Russia now? What does he hope for? Can he capitalize his gains? What would a Nazi-dominated Russia mean to us? Can the Russians hold out long? Is there a parallel with Napoleon's disastrous march on Moscow? These and other questions are set forth and answered in an article by The Post's foreign affairs columnist, Barnet Nover. The 21 questions asked and discussed by Nover in this Sunday Post article cover all phases of the present situation and should prove invaluable background material in helping you follow the day to day developments.

OTHER ARTICLES ON THE WAR

Some of the questions which are touched on briefly by Nover are developed more fully by other Post writers in separate Sunday Post articles. The military aspects of the campaign are Edward T. Folliard's topic. J. G. Norris writes on the possibility of British help for the new ally and finds that this new development offers a golden opportunity for British air power. Hedley Donovan sees a shift in the balance of power in the Far East as a result of the new war, with Japan in a dilemma, China cut off from Russian supplies, and the Dutch East Indies given a breathing spell.

LOVE, WITH COMPLICATIONS

After all that war news it's a pleasant contrast to turn to the Sunday Post novel, although the plot is almost as thick as Nazi intrigue. The characters: Sharleen, whom everyone wants to marry. Kirk Desmond, the explorer. Larry Van de Venter, wealthy New Yorker. Dale Cameron, Sharleen's boss. Nigel, a British refugee child. Kirk and Sharleen escape from a plane wreck in the Arizona desert and fall in love. But she has the responsibility of taking care of Nigel—and Larry's life endangered by an auto accident, may depend on her marrying him! Throw in some episodes in the desert and an expedition to the South American jungles, and you have quite a romantic story to help you pass the weekend. The novel is "Not Just to Remember," and the author is Alice Ross Colver.

Fierce Thrusts by Tanks Force Red Army Back

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Saturday), June 28.—The Soviet command acknowledged today that fierce Nazi tank thrusts have forced its army back toward the old Russian-northern Poland frontier, but said elsewhere Red troops held fast and even counterattacked across the Danube into Rumania to seize 500 prisoners.

Soviet Division Smashed, DNB Agency Boasts

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 27.—A pocket gouged out of the Russian defense lines by panzer forces, annihilation of an entire Red Army division, and extensive disruption of Russia's rail system by air bombs were claimed for the German military today by the official news agency, D. N. B.

The field headquarters of Reichsfuehrer Hitler delayed its promised announcement of great and detailed successes in the six-day-old war with Russia, but D. N. B. primarily describing yesterday's fighting, was more specific.

Informed German quarters also said with optimism that the main decision over Russia already had been won.

Without mentioning places, D.N.B. said the Soviet division which it claimed was destroyed had lost contact with the main body of Russian troops and lost heavily in every branch, particularly in heavy tanks, guns and trucks.

The lines of Russian prisoners trudging back in the summer heat to prison camps have lengthened considerably in the past 24 hours, the agency stated, and piles of booty are mounting steadily. A German spokesman said figures on prisoners and booty could not yet be disclosed, however.

D. N. B. also said reports from the entire front from the White Sea to the Black indicated that innumerable soldiers of the minorities on the Russian side had voluntarily thrown down their arms and surrendered to the advancing Germans.

It mentioned a Lithuanian battery which it said deserted yesterday, and 200 Cossacks who came over to the Nazi side in a body.

The Luftwaffe, for which mastery of the air over the fighting fronts already has been claimed, again struck at Russian airports, railways and highways.

Germans said Russia's transport system was far less efficient than those of western Europe in the first place, and that well-placed German bombs had caused the clogging and breakdown of those lines still usable.

Destruction of 21 Russian planes standing on the ground near the Rumanian border was claimed for the Nazi air force. Another German squadron was credited with smashing a Russian column of trucks without loss of a single plane.

[The German radio, in a broadcast heard by N. B. C., said Russian planes have been driven from the sky and Nazi air superiority "can now destroy practically all Soviet planes on the ground."]

German radio war reporters describing achievements of the infantry said long forced marches were broken by the toughest kind of fighting against well-prepared Russian positions or in defended villages. The Russians were especially clever in constructing concealed pillboxes from which the flank of approaching troops could be strafed.

The Germans frequently silenced machine gun nests with hand grenades and pushed forward, but suddenly Russians would be at their rear or side in excellently camouflaged positions which they reached through interconnecting tunnel work. Once the resistance was broken, however, the steady march forward continued in choking dust and stifling heat with infantrymen suffering from smarting eyes and thickened, parched lips.

A Soviet information bureau communique said the Red withdrawal to new defense positions occurred along a three-point line formed by Siaulai - Vilna - Baranowicze — the path of a German drive to capture Minsk, White Russian capital and rail center.

In counterattacks during this retreat the Soviets said they destroyed 40 German tanks and a German field headquarters, and killed a Nazi general.

Great Battle in Second Day

The communique gave this picture elsewhere:

In the Luck and Lwow areas in central and southern Poland, a great German-Russian tank battle went through its second day, German attempts at a break-through being beaten back with heavy Nazi losses and the Soviet capture of much booty and many Germans.

Along the Prut River Soviet defense forces still held their lines while a stab into Rumania across the Danube near its mouth was aided by a Red flotilla.

The Russians said they took 800 German and Rumanian prisoners along the Prut.

700 Nazis Killed, Wounded

In heavy fighting to recapture an unidentified village, Soviet troops were reported to have killed or wounded 700 Germans.

Russian bombers were described as especially active against German ships at Constanta.

Soviet warplanes kept the invaders under long and violent aerial attack with such bloody results as actually to constitute, along with the defense of ground forces, "a heavy defeat" for the invaders.

The withdrawal was in the areas of Siauliai, in Lithuania; Vilna, old Poland, about 150 miles to the southeast, and Baranowicze, which lies about 100 miles almost due south of Vilna and some 90 miles southwest of Minsk itself.

Baranowicze, which is in Poland, is 120 miles within Russian territory from the nearest German point, is still some 30 miles short of old Russia itself.

There was no indication as to whether the new Russian defense line had been formed east or west of the town.

In this most vital of all the battle areas the Nazi thrust against Minsk was in twin columns headed across the Polish Plains north of the Pinsk marshes in the regions of Vilna and Baronowicze. In the Siauliai sector, the Germans appeared trying to strike northeastward in the direction of Riga.

Russian Troops Reformed

It was declared without details that Russian troops fell back to "new positions and reformed themselves for new military operations."

Fighting likewise continued far to the south in the region of Luck, old Poland, whence the Germans presumably were striking at Kiev, the capital of the Russian Ukraine, and still farther southward in the Sculeni sector along the Prut River, which divides Rumania and Russian Bessarabia.

During the day, Sir Stafford Cripps, the British ambassador to Moscow, returned here by plane bringing a mission representing the British army, navy, air force and economics. It was assigned to integrate the British-Russian war effort against the Germans.

Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, praised British aviation now active on the western front, declaring that the Germans had lost 2,000 planes in the west and that British aviation already was superior in quality and soon would be in quantity, too.

Reds Attacked, War Declared By Hungary

By the United Press

Budapest, June 27.—Hungarian bombers attacked Russian military objectives and land forces of the two countries clashed on the frontier today only a few hours after Premier Ladislaus de Bardossy announced that Hungary had entered the war, the high command announced tonight.

Bardossy told Parliament that Hungary had decided to fight Russia in retaliation for Red raids on Hungarian territory Wednesday and promised that Hungarian troops would take "adequate measures."

The high command communique said that Hungarian planes had started fires and caused damage to Russian military targets and all planes returned safely.

"Russian land forces at Valoc and Toronya opened fire today which was answered by Hungarian infantry," the communique said.

"Russian planes tried to reach Hungarian territory during the day at several points. However they were unable to bomb and were driven off by Hungarian antiaircraft guns."

A fire broke out in the refineries of the Batum Oil Co. in Almas Fuzito, about 40 miles from Budapest today, attributed to "technical errors." Some casualties were caused.

[It is possible the fire was caused by Russian bombing.]

Coincident with Hungary's decision to fight beside her Axis partner, news was received that an explosion had occurred at the military ammunition depot at Nagyteteny, causing an undetermined number of casualties.

Bardossy's announcement in Parliament of the government's decision drew loud cheers from members of all parties.

Vichy Won't Officially Join War on Soviet

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, June 27.—In government quarters it was stated today that there is no question of French troops being sent officially to fight against the Soviet. It was said, however, to be within the possibilities that members of private organizations in the occupied zone might be able to raise volunteer corps to join the "European crusade against Communism."

The conflict between the Reich and the Soviets has coincided with widespread measures in both zones of France to curb Communist activities and the influence of the party which despite being officially suppressed has admittedly retained much power among the French masses.

In Paris it is reported three attorneys, former members of the Communist party, one of whom had been retained by the defense of the former Communist leader Gabriel Peri, were arrested at the Palais de Justice. M. Peri was recently captured after months in hiding since the Communist leaders were ordered to be tried.

From numerous towns come news of raids on clandestine Communist organizations. Two young men aged 19 and 21 were sentenced to two years and 18 months in prison at Carcassone for having raised the Red flag on the church spire in the nearby village of Salsigne. Five others of the about the same age were arrested today in Beziers for distributing Communist tracts.

Blast May Have Wrecked O-9, Inquiry Told

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., June 27.—A Navy officer testified today that it was "conceivable" an explosion "might have taken place" on the O-9 before the submarine plunged to the bottom of the ocean off Portsmouth, N. H., carrying 33 men to their death.

Lieut. Comdr. Robert M. Peacher, commander of Submarine Division 11 to which the O-9 was assigned quickly told a Navy court of inquiry, however, that "1,001 things may have happened" and that he had given the matter long thought before advancing the explosion theory.

"However, I do believe it was something that happened inside the boat. There was no structural collapse," he said.

To meet what he called "ill advised comment" about the 23-year-old submarine's condition, Commander Peacher said about $800,000 had been spent recommissioning the O-9, a figure which "closely approximated" her original cost.

She was in better condition, he maintained, than 40 other old type submarines which have been returned to service.

Commander Peacher faced the court after Capt. Elwin F. Cutts, commander of the submarine base here, who said as far as he knew the O-9 was "all right" on June 2 when she reported here, 18 days before the tragedy.

Cutts told Commander Scott Umsted, staff member of Naval War College at Newport, R. I., that while the O-9 had been in New London, her commander, Lieut. Howard J. Abbott, had requested only "mild repairs."

He referred to the records covering the sunken submersible which, he said, showed that while attached to the base here she had made eight dives, "some of which included several quick dives."

Besides Commanders McCann and Umsted, the board comprised Rear Admiral William T. Tarrant, commandant of the First Naval District, Boston Navy Yard, and Capt. John Brown, captain of the yard, Portsmouth.

Allies Pushing Syrian Attack On Palmyra

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, Turkey, June 27.—Allied forces in Syria are carrying out a successful encircling action about Palmyra, despite stubborn French resistance, according to British military sources in Ankara this evening. British sources reported Royal Air Force bombing south of this strategic city as well as raids on the Rayak airdrome and other enemy airfields to the north.

Palmyra is a major roadhead connecting ancient caravan routes from the south and the coasts and British sources predict that its capture, expected soon, will accelerate the British advance, at the same time extracting one more strategic supply and operations base from the hands of the French.

The main allied column moving up the coast is reported by British military sources to have approached within 12 miles of Beirut with the cooperation of British bombers and British warships off the coast, which are maintaining a steady fire on the defending French positions near the coastline.

One British military source here today declared that Palmyra is "in the bag" and that the collapse of Beirut and the end of French resistance is now only a matter of days or at the most a week. He reported that French petrol and ammunition supplies are running dangerously low and that muen French motorized equipment is being abandoned for want of fuel.

[Vichy reported British attacks in the Damascus area have been repulsed with heavy losses and their offensive generally has been halted on the whole Syrian front, according to the Associated Press.]

British air sources deny that the Damascus bombings were carried out by German aircraft based in Syria, asserting that all German warplanes in Syria have now been withdrawn or destroyed. They insisted that the German raiders flew from the Dodecanese.

British Can Now Eat Twopence More Meat

London, June 27 (AP).—The ministry of food announced an increase tonight in the weekly meat ration, starting July 7, from one shilling to one shilling and twopence—from about 20 to 23 cents—per person.

It said the increase was made possible by the arrival of exceptionally large quantities of frozen meats from overseas.

Nazis Aimed at Revolt In Russia, Writer Says

[Editor's note—Robert St. John, Associated Press Balkan correspondent now en route to the United States, gives the following behind-the-scenes picture of the current German-Russian war. St. John's vivid dispatches in the past year have told of the steady German penetration and conquest of the Balkans, including the dethronement of King Carol of Rumania, Iron Guard rioting, the Yugoslav debacle, and of his own hazardous escape by sea from Yugoslavia to Greece and then Africa.]

By Robert St. John

Aboard the S. S. President Garfield, June 27.—Rumanian secret agents scattered widely throughout Bessarabia, Bucovina, and the Ukraine for the past six months have been laying the groundwork for an anti-Communist revolution which they hoped would be set off as German and Rumanian troops moved forward into Russia.

How far they have succeeded is not known due to a wall of secrecy presently surrounding eastern front developments.

The plan was outlined to me by a highly-placed Rumanian official when I was last in Bucharest—long before the Berlin-Moscow break—but due to censorship regulations it then was impossible to write the story.

As proof of how well organized this campaign was, my informant showed me on several occasions the reports smuggled back into Rumania by these espionage and counter-revolution agents.

These described economic and living conditions within Russia, military moves, and the progress "in organizing for chaos," as the revolution plan often was called.

On one occasion Rumanian agents were described as prematurely successful and widely scattered revolutionary disorders broke out in Bessarabia.

My informant implied that the entire scheme was financed indirectly from Berlin with copies of all reports being submitted to the German legation in Bucharest immediately upon receipt.

The agents themselves, however, were at first unaware that they were working for the Nazis, and believed they were merely spreading the groundwork for an eventual Rumanian attempt to regain territory lost to the Soviets.

Most of them had homes in Bucovina and Bessarabia. Others got into those areas before the Russian occupation was completed and automatically became Russian citizens.

When the Russians took over, vast numbers of Soviet secret agents arrived with the army and spent months attempting to put their fingers on Rumanians likely to be engaged in espionage. As a result, thousands of Rumanians were moved deep into the Ukraine away from the new "buffer frontier."

But this only aided agents who were caught in this transfer to one of the sections on which Bucharest—meaning Berlin—was most anxious to get reports.

My informant declined to disclose specifically how reports were smuggled across into Rumania but it was learned in other quarters that a chain of sympathizers who had become Russian citizens against their will had established veritable underground courier services across Ukraine, Bessarabia and Bucovina right up to the frontier.

Germany's attack on Russia came as no surprise to Rumanians who were on the inside. After Premier General Ion Antonescu returned from his first trip to Berlin it was common knowledge in government circles that Hitler had promised that during 1941 Germany would help Rumania get back Bessarabia and Bucovina.

No hint of this promise was allowed to be dispatched from the country, although General Antonescu on frequent public occasions tried to pacify internal disorder with veiled implications of "glorious days" in store for his people when they would be able to "wipe out the humiliations of the last two years."

The press and public, who took this to mean some readjustment of the Transylvanian situation, were not disillusioned, but Antonescu's intimates were told confidentially he referred to impending German-Russian hostilities.

Japanese Fear U. S.-Russian Joint Action

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 27.—With Vladdivostok and the Russian maritime provinces in the center of public interest, the cabinet and an extraordinary liaison conference between the government and the high command met again today while the German Ambassador, Gen. Eugen Ott, called on Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka here, and the Japanese Ambassador, Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, called on the German foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, in Berlin.

Official discussions were kept a strictly guarded secret but both the press and various political groups, defying a police warning against "false reports and groundless rumors," are beginning an active campaign in urging the government, in the words of one political party resolution, "to take the right step at the right moment."

Under the police ban, even the contents of the party resolution were kept secret, but the newspaper Hochi's commentator publicly asked the government, 'Are you placing Vladivostok in the hands of America?"

"America," he writes, "will concentrate its ammunitions and other goods in aid of the Soviets at Vladivostok and is displaying ten times the zeal it did in aiding Chiang Kai Shek. There are 200 Russian submarines in Vladivostok to guard their transport and if the United States and the Soviets reach more intimate relations, the Soviets might as a last resort offer Vladivostok to America as a joint naval base and the Soviet Union as a joint air base for the two countries.

"America is looking for a position near Japan to use as a base for war operations against Japan. If she gets into Vladivostok, what she could not get on the Chinese coast, it will be a matter of great satisfaction to her."

The writer concludes: "I cry for responsible consideration of the matter."

There is no reason to believe that the resolutions of the various parties and groups go off in a different direction. And it is significant that one of these groups, calling itself the Council for the Launching of National Policies and which was specially formed for that purpose, contains names like Admiral Nobumasa Suetsuga, chairman of the Central Cooperative Council of the Imperial Rule Assistance Association; former Premier Gen. Senjuro Hayashi; Admiral Ryoio Nakamura, who at the outbreak of the war predicted Hitler's downfall; Kenzo Adchi Seigo Nakano, head of Tohokai party, which indorses Mr. Matsuoka's policy; Col. Kingoro Hashimoto, who played a prominent part in the early part of the China incident.

Kisuru Toyama, head of the Black Dragon Society, who had been expected to participate in the meeting, remained absent.

The resolutions of these groups were presented to the government by personal calls of their leaders.

Soviet Bombers Strike Again At Finn Centers

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Finland, June 27.—Soviet Russian bombers struck anew today at Finnish centers, still scarred by aerial raids of the 1939-1940 Red army invasion, in the northernmost activity of a new battle front stretching from the White Sea to the Black Sea.

As in the winter conflict which Finland maintained for 3½ months before accepting the peace terms of Moscow on March 13, 1940 the port and shipbuilding center of Turku was a target most heavily hit.

In that city on the Gulf of Bothnia, with a normal population of 86,500, more than 100 buildings were destroyed, other property was damaged and numerous casualties were reported.

[Turku is a logical port for the landing of German troops which are reported to have been assigned to bolster the Finnish defense.]

Meanwhile Moscow's declaration that Soviet attacks in Finland were aimed against German objectives was officially branded by Finnish authorities tonight as "a malicious lie."

Spain Rapidly Enlisting Legion To Fight Russia

By the Associated Press

Madrid, June 27.—Registration of volunteers for Spain's legion to fight beside Germany against Russia went forward rapidly today in Madrid and provincial capitals.

A queue of men, most of them middle class youths with a sprinkling of Spanish army regulars and civil war veterans, lined up at Madrid's enlistment booths.

(Here two paragraphs were deleted by censor.)

Enlistment routine was rapid for those accepted by recruiting officers of the Falange, Spain's only political party. The lists will be closed next Wednesday.

"Spain must avenge the destruction done by Russia in the civil war," Falange Party Secretary Jose Luis de Arres declared.

Raids on Continent Presage Liberating Army, Briton Says

(In the following authoritative article on the meaning of the intensified R. A. F. attacks on German bases in the occupied countries of northwestern Europe, Wing Commander L. V. Fraser says these raids are the forerunner of "a coming army of deliverance," indicating a new British expeditionary force may be contemplated to recapture key bases on the continent.)

By Wing Commander L. V. Fraser
Veteran R. A. F. Officer
Written for International News Service

London, June 27.—The Luftwaffe has to fight on two fronts just at a time when the R. A. F. is entering on its period of big expansion. And the Royal Air Force, seizing its opportunity, is making Germany feel its growing punch in three ways.

First of all, those nightly hammerings on German ports and industrial towns. Of these the air ministry communiques say little. All we read is, "heavy raids were carried out over the Ruhr for the seventh night in succession. . . ." and then ". . . . for the fourteenth night in succession."

Behind those bare words stands a devastating tale of destruction over vast industrial areas, the ports and communication lines of Germany—relentlessly night after night by the heaviest bomb loads yet dropped over Germany, with no respite to repair the growing wilderness of devastation before the next blow falls.

And then there are the daylight offensives over northern France and the unceasing daylight attacks on enemy shipping.

The aircraft of the fighter command are now carrying the offensive to the enemy. Last year the aeiral front was well above the British coast. Today it is pushed back across the English Channel and over occupied territory.

The real significance in this offensive is the ratio of loss, which the R. A. F. has completely reversed.

In the corresponding tactical period of 1940, when Germany was sending over offensive sweeps, the enemy lost at a rate sufficient to shake the German high command. The ratio of loss was more than 4 to 1 in favor of the R. A. F. as defenders. It is now more than 4 to 1 in favor of the R. A. F. in carrying the offensive to the enemy.

The third great offensive which the R. A. F. is carrying out is not less far-reaching in its effect because it is less spectacular. On March 12 of this year the aircraft bomber command began a series of daylight attacks on German shipping from Norway to the Mediterranean. Between then and June 22 no fewer than 97 enemy ships were destroyed, 19 were severely damaged or disabled and 66 more were damaged in greater or less degree.

Thus was anticipated the inevitable step of the Germans, who with the coming of spring and better weather were certain to begin sending their ships along the coast in an attempt to take food to Germany from invaded countries and war supplies from Germany to bases from which attacks on Britain could be made.

By this means, Germans would hope to relieve their overloaded railways. Oil would go to submarine bases on the Atlantic Coast of France and foodstuffs seized from conquered farms would be taken to Germany. Along the coasts of Denmark and Norway there would be the same exchange of goods for the sole benefit of the oppressor.

Regularly and systematically, 1,600 miles of coastline from Sogne Fjord, in Norway, to Bordeaux, on the Atlantic coast of France, have been swept and the enemy has never known where or what time of day the R. A. F. would strike.

The fringe of the enemy's coast has often been swept, as that margin of sea is all that the British navy has left him. Attacks have been made on naval bases in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany itself, especially on the Kiel Canal. Formations of bombers have swept low over Heligoland more than once, and have taken defenses by surprise.

Nor have these daylight raids been confined to coastal targets. In France, as in Holland, Belgium, Norway and Denmark, the sight of a British bomber flying low over fields and villages is becoming familiar.

It is a welcome sight to subject peoples who know these are the vanguard of a coming army of deliverance. Many of them wave and cheer as the bombers go on their way to probe defenses and demolish outposts of Germany's uneasy empire.

Chinese Division Joins Its Foes

Shanghai (Saturday), June 28 (AP).—An entire division of the Chinese Nationalist army, numbering 15,000 men, commanded by Gens. Yang Chung-hwa and Huang Tze-chiang, surrendered to forces of the Japan-sponsored Nanking government on June 21 and joined its "peace preservation corps," the Domei News Agency reported from Nanking today, quoting a Japanese army spokesman. The surrenders took place in Anhwei and Kiangsi Provinces, it was claimed.

The shots were to have been used in the film "Yank in the Royal Air Force", which is being made for release throughout the world.

RAF Pours Bombs On German Bases For 17th Night

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), June 28 (AP).—R. A. F. bombers pounde northwestern German military targets and Nazi bases on the French coast during the night in the seventeenth successive night of a superattack, it was authoritatively learned today.

Shattering explosions awakened the people on the English side who had gone to bed thinking the British attacks had been finished for the night. Earlier in the night and during the day the R. A. F. had been busy hammering at the German-held French coastline.

Observers on England's southeast coast saw but little of the attack as the sky over Calais became red with the bursting of antiaircraft.

While the British bombers attacked objectives in what is developing into a practically continuous air drive, they released countless flares to light their targets.

One German bomber was shot down over Britain last night.

The air ministry reported hits on a 3,000-ton German supply ship off Dunkerque yesterday, and on a steel and engineering works near Lille, France.

Ten R. A. F. fighters were missing ni these operations, while seven Nazi fighters were known to have been destroyed.

The Gallup Poll

62% in U. S. Oppose Negotiated Peace Now Between Germany and Great Britain

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 27.—Rumors of peace between Germany and England are almost certain to be revived if Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union is successfully concluded in the next few weeks or months. Indeed, a number of isolationist leaders in the United States, notably Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, have already urged that Britain try to arrange a negotiated peace.

The majority of American voters interviewed just before the outbreak of the Nazi-Soviet conflict expressed overwhelming opposition to the idea that Britain should try to arrange a peace with Hitler even if she were permitted to keep all her empire intact.

One of the main reasons given by the majority is that "Hitler's peace promises couldn't be trusted," while those on the minority side argue chiefly that any kind of peace would be better than the "senseless" slaughter in Europe, in which "nobody gains."

The issue put to voters in the survey, completed before the Nazi-Soviet war started, was as follows:

"If peace could be obtained today on the basis of Germany holding the countries she has conquered so far, and with Britain keeping the British Empire as it now stands, would you be in favor of such a peace?"

The results were:

Yes	29%
No	62
Undecided	9

Women interviewed in the survey proved to be much more in favor of the peace idea than men. Whereas only 24 per cent of men interviewed thought Britain should make peace with Germany now, 34 per cent of the women thought so.

A similar survey conducted in April brought results closely resembling today's. In that study 29 per cent of voters with opinions on the subject thought Britain should try to get together with Germany to work up some sort of peace terms, while 71 per cent thought Britain should go on fighting.

"Hitler's word isn't worth the breath it takes for him to puff it out," exclaimed a 39-year-old longshoreman in Detroit in today's survey. "He's a born liar, and nothing in this world is ever going to change him."

"Hitler can't be trusted," is another comment typical of the majority. "He'd turn around and wipe off another couple of countries in no time."

Among those who think the peace idea should be given a try the most typical comments are that if some kind of peace can be made the United States won't have to worry about getting into the war, that Hitler could administer the affairs of Europe better than anybody else and should be given a chance at it, and that Britain should get out now while she still has something left.

10 Billion Army Supply Bill Passed

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday took only 80 minutes to approve a $10,384,821,624 War Department appropriation, biggest single supply bill in American history, as Congress tackled a mass of legislation that must become law before midnight Monday, close of the current fiscal year.

A few minutes after the unanimous Senate vote on the Army appropriations, House conferees agreed to accept the Senate version of the measure, which eliminates drastic antistrike amendments written into the bill by the House.

Both houses are expected today to approve the conference report on the bill, which may then be taken by plane to Hyde Park, N. Y., for President Roosevelt's signature.

FHA Bill Approved

In swift action on other legislation the Senate yesterday approved:

A bill extending the life of the Federal Housing Administration and increasing its maximum authorization for outstanding mortgage insurance from $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000.

A $150,000,000 appropriation for recreational and sanitary facilities for defense workers and their families. This measure and the FHA bill now await Mr. Roosevelt's approval.

The District of Columbia's regular appropriation bill, carrying a total of $54,785,000, which now goes to conference.

After disposing of this legislation, the Senate put in two hours of debate on the bill to extend until 1943 President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation power and agreed to vote on the measure at 1 p. m. today.

Saturday Session Slated

With the Senate holding its first Saturday session since the lend-lease debate, the House will stand by today to send Senate-approved measures to conference and act on conference reports. Congressional action must be completed on six appropriation bills today and Monday, or some of the agencies involved would be operating without funds on the first day of the fiscal year 1942.

The Regular Army appropriation bill provides funds to maintain an Army of 1,500,000 through the next 12 months. A supplementary appropriation carrying funds for another 150,000 men has already passed the House and an early War Department request for still further funds is expected to bring Army strength to 1,850,000.

The bill approved by the Senate yesterday includes an appropriation of nearly $3,000,000,000 for adding 12,856 planes to the Army air forces. It also carries $500,000,000 for construction of a network of new munition plants.

Antistrike amendments eliminated from the bill by the Senate would have barred the use of any funds appropriated by the measure to pay individuals or corporations refusing for ten days to abide by recommendations of the Defense Mediation Board or persons maintaining picket lines around national defense plants.

China Shipment Evades U-Boats, Then Smashes

Athens, Ga., (U.P.)—Chinaware, which successfully ran the gauntlet of German U-boats, found the calm waters of the western Atlantic to be another Waterloo—the china was smashed.

The University of Georgia Alumni society ordered the commemorative china plates from England. After weathering the perilous North Atlantic to Boston, the plates were reshipped by boat to Savannah. The boat ran aground and the dishes were cracked.

Army Seeking To Place U. S. On War Footing

younger and more able officers to positions of leadership, the department made public the first list of selective advancement to the grade of colonel and announced that "it is probable that a system of temporary promotion by selection will be established for all grades in the Army."

Undersecretary Patterson at the same time wrote Speaker Rayburn and Vice President Wallace to ask Congress to authorize appointment of an all-powerful "plucking board" to eliminate inefficient officers.

"It is imperative," he said, "that during the emergency the Secretary of War have authority to vitalize the active list of the Army by removing therefrom those officers who are unable to stand up under the strain to which they must be subjected if we are to build up a modern army capable of meeting the present demands of modern combat.

"There are some officers who, though qualified to perform their assigned duties under normal conditions, are not capable of performing the duties demanded of them in times of emergency. The retention of such officers on the active list during these critical times constitutes a real danger to national security."

The proposed bill submitted by Patterson would suspend the present so-called "Class B" system of eliminating unefficient officers during the emergency, and provide a more summary system. Under the Class B system, a series of boards must pass on the elimination of an unfit officer, with the result that few are ever discharged or retired under its operation.

The board of at least five general officers could recommend the retirement or discharge of officers for any reason "deemed by it to be good and sufficient," with the Secretary of War having final say in the matter.

The bill provides that any officer can be removed from the active list under the proposed system "whose performance of duty, or general efficiency, compared with other officers of the same grade and length of service is such as to warrant such action, or whose retention on the active list is not justified for other good and sufficient reasons appearing to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War."

Officers with less than seven years service found unfit would be discharged, while those with more service would be retired. Retired pay would be allowed at the rate of 2½ per cent of active base pay multiplied by years of service, with a maximum of 75 per cent, while officers who served in the World War would be allowed the full 75 per cent.

Patterson estimated that not more than 2 per cent of the Army's officers might be eliminated under the bill. There are now 14,700 Regulars, 21,800 National Guardsmen and 53,000 Reserves in active service.

The first list of temporary promotions to colonel by selective appointment yesterday included the names of 274 lieutenant colonels for immediate advancement. Ultimately some 800 temporary colonels will be required and it is intended to base subsequent selections mainly on officers' caliber of service during the emergency.

The list of lieutenant colonels selected for advancement follows:

Superbomber Soars an Hour On Test Flight

By James Padgitt
International News Service Staff Writer

March Field, Calif., June 27.—A new chapter in aviation history was written today when Maj. Stanley Umstead of the United States Army Air Corps landed the 82-ton, $3,500,000 Douglas B-19 bomber at March Field Army air base after a 57-minute 65-mile test flight from Clover Field.

The bomber, the largest and most expensive in the world, was praised for its performance by Maj. Umstead, chief test pilot for the air corps, who said "she handled like a million dollars."

World interest was centered in the takeoff of the sky dreadnaught. Representatives of the War Department and the British government, high ranking air corps officials and the Nation's foremost aviation engineers witnessed the start of the maiden flight of the huge ship.

At the take off the bomber roared down the 3,800-foot, specially-constructed concrete runway and lifted into the air in 17 seconds, requiring less than 2,000 feet of the runway to be on its way.

In one paralyzing moment the super ship dipped suddenly as it was only 10 feet above the concrete runway. But the ship righted itself quickly and with effortless ease climbed skyward and soared out over the ocean.

The ship banked at an elevation of 3,500 feet and circled the field. Then, escorted by Army bombers and pursuit ships, she soared eastward to March Field, where she made a landing, described by Army observers as "perfect."

Some 50,000 persons witnessed the take off. Hundreds of thousands of others in cities and on highways saw the sky giant and its convoy winging toward March Field.

With Maj. Umstead on the now historic flight were Maj. Howard G. Bunker, Army representative; Lieut. Col. James G. Taylor, from the office of chief of Air Corps, and Merle Steele, Mark Coogler (crew chief), Jack Grant and Raoul Escallier, of Douglas Aircraft.

Immediately after the landing at March Field, Maj. Umstead said: "There is nothing wrong with her. The brakes which delayed our first flight a month ago, worked perfectly. She bumped a little in the landing, but that is natural for a big ship which is carrying only a partial load."

The test pilot admitted he was a "little nervous" at the take off and at the landing.

OPM Adopts Zone Plan For Aircraft Labor Contracts

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Defense labor chief Sidney Hillman yesterday announced an OPM policy to establish zone agreements on wages and working conditions for the Nation's aircraft industry, and said that conferences looking toward the same goal were already under way in the defense construction industry.

The zone agreements, he indicated at a press conference, would be patterned after those already in effect or about to be ratified for the entire shipbuilding industry. They would ban strikes, lockouts or other production stoppages during the two-year life of the pact.

Invitations to both management and unions involved in aircraft construction will be issued within a few days, he said. At present, he added, the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and Federal Works Agency are already conferring with the major labor organizations working on construction projects related to defense.

Won't Force Unionization

Although Hillman declared the zone agreements would not force the organization by labor unions of factories now unorganized, the effect of the pacts has been to encourage collective bargaining contracts, and the stabilization conference method has received generally sympathetic response from the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. They are, in effect, the first step in the "industry council" proposal advocated by C. I. O. President Philip Murray.

A second victory yesterday for union labor was issuance of a National Labor Relations Board order requiring Weirton Steel Co. to disband allegedly company-dominated labor organizations and to "cease discouraging membership in the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee" at its three plants in Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio.

The sweeping order, also requiring the reinstatement with back pay of 17 employes, was incorporated in a 96-page opinion, the fruit of what is said to be the longest and costliest Labor Board case on record.

Labor Spies Accused

Substantiated by page after page of examples, the board opinion held that company agents had spied on its employes, physically assaulted some and incited other employes to beat up union sympathizers and interfered with employe self-organization. A letter of F. T. Weir head of the concern, was quoted in which Weir attacked the C. I. O. and pledged the company's collaboration in promoting a series of company-union plans.

Hillman said that the proposed aircraft stabilization agreements would cover from between 350,000 to 400,000 workers in the industry and that the goal would be to set standard pay rates throughout a zone or region for defined classifications of work. Unions involved, he said, were the C. I. O. United Auto Workers, and the A. F. of L. machinists and pattern makers.

Conferences in the construction industry were with A. F. of L. unions, he said.

Referring to the shipbuilding agreements, which have been ratified on the Pacific Coast and are in the process of being approved in the Gulf Coast, Atlantic Coast and Great Lakes area, the OPM associate director general stated that since they were first proposed in September there has not been a single jurisdictional dispute in the industry.

The first test of these agreements, challenged in the San Francisco area by 1,800 C. I. O. and A. F. of L. machinists who struck at 11 shipyards for wages higher than those provided in the zone agreement, was ended successfully early yesterday when the C. I. O. local voted to resume operations Monday. The A. F. of L. group had agreed the previous day to call off the seven-week stoppage.

Questioned on the future of labor relations in the defense industries, Hillman said that the Nation could "reasonably expect" no new serious defense strikes.

He discounted reports that the Russo-German war, and consequent shift in the Communist "party line," would be responsible for his forecast of a more quiescent labor front. The answer, he hinted broadly, was in the strong stand made by the Government in the allegedly Communist-provoked North American Aviation strike. He implied that by showing that the Government "was not afraid of them," subversive elements had been routed a full week before the beginning of Russian hostilities.

Questioned on the necessity for legislation giving the Government power to fix wages and thus prevent upward spiralling of costs, Hillman declared that the anticipated stabilization agreements, plus new wage contracts recently signed in the major defense industries of coal, steel and automobiles, had, in effect, stabilized wages.

OPM Swiftly Acts to Halt Mich. Strike

Gravely concerned over a strike at the Dow Chemical Co.'s plant at Midland, Mich., almost the sole source of raw magnesium, essential in aircraft and munitions production, the OPM yesterday dispatched a special "trouble-shooter" to the scene and Defense Chief William S. Knudsen telephoned Gov. Murray D. VanWagoner, of Michigan, asking that he do everything possible to keep the plant in operation.

Pickets representing the C. I. O. United Mine Workers chemical division, took stations at plant gates this morning in protest to the "disciplinary" suspension of two workers. It was not immediately determined how many of the company's 4,000 workers joined the walkout. The plant appeared to operate during the day without interruption.

Informed sources here indicated privately their belief that both the U. M. W. and an independent union were using the occasion to "campaign" in advance of a labor board election on July 8 to determine the collective bargaining agency. The election was ordered as a means of settling a dispute which flared at the plant earlier this year.

About 75 State troopers patrolled the area and reported no violence, although the workers who passed through the picket lines were greeted with boos and catcalls. It was estimated that about 200 workers were in the picket lines, with an additional group of 400 or 500 standing in the streets.

Throughout the rest of the country, the strike situation had quieted yesterday almost to the point of disappearance. OPM labor sources here discounted the possibility of a dispute at the Sperry Gyroscope Co., New York, materializing into a strike, noting that almost all issues had been successfully negotiated.

In Pittsburgh, a strike of A. F. of L. truckers still continued, although an agreement was reached to move defense material. In San Francisco, the strike of 1,800 machinists in 11 shipyards was all but ended, with agreements to return to work on Monday.

Also going back to their jobs on Monday are striking employes of the Piper Aircraft Corporation, Lock Haven, Pa., who voted to accept a settlement of their wage dispute. The company makes training planes used in the civilian pilot program.

Discrimination Assailed

New York, June 27 (AP).—The National Association of Manufacturers recommended today that the Government urge employers specifically against discrimination in the case of either union or nonunion workers.

This recommendation, regarded as a statement of labor policy by the big employers group, was voted by its board of directors, representing virtually every major defense manufacturing industry in the Nation.

"Within the past week," said the board, "the country has been presented with the spectacle of American workers in defense industries being coerced by Government agencies and employers into joining labor organizations not of their own choice as the price of a job.

"Denial by Government, by employers, by other employes, or by anyone of the worker's right to work is un-American and a long step toward dictatorship."

Criminal Action Authorized Against 'Trotskyite' Party

The Federal Government yesterday authorized criminal proceedings against leaders of the Socialist Workers Party, which it termed a "Trotskyite branch of the Communist movement," on charges it is engaging in "seditious conspiracy" and that it advocates overthrow of this Government by force and violence.

Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle, announcing the action, said the prosecution will be directed against persons who are "leaders of the Socialist Workers Party, and who have gained control of a legitimate labor union in order to use it for illegitimate purposes."

It was reported here that the principal party leaders involved are leaders of Local 544 of the C. I. O. General Drivers, Helpers and Inside Workers Union of Minneapolis, Minn. Recent charges by A. F. of L. Teamsters' President Dan Tobin, that the C. I. O. had "raided" this formerly A. F. of L. Union to bring it into the C. I. O. camp, precipitated a declaration by President Roosevelt, a fortnight ago, that no union should raid rival labor ranks during the present emergency.

Draft Boards to Reconsider Married Men Classed 1-A mend action by the Army. In no case of a favorable recommendation by the selection organization has an appeal for discharge been refused.

The liberalized policy whereby deferments are granted where there is "substantial contribution" applies generally with only one exception—the man who has married recently and obviously to avoid the draft.

Nevertheless, the order stipulated that "the newly-married registrant has the same general right to deferment as any other registrant." In other words the burden of proof is on the local board to prove that the registrant married merely for draft evasion purposes.

The ruling made it clear that it applied not only to future classifications but directs reconsideration of all married men already classified in class 1-A.

Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director of Selective Service, listed the three principal types of draft cases provoking appeals for discharge. These were the registrant who was not deferred because his wife works and aids in support of the family; the recently married man whose marriage was considered suspect; and the registrant who failed to gain deferment because of his financial status "despite the disruption of the family unit subject to his induction."

The official, commenting on the first-mentioned case, said: "Registrants whose wives work . . . may not for that reason alone be denied deferment . . . Local boards should remember every husband is under legal obligation to support his wife and children and that obligation is not removed because his wife has chosen to aid in the family mantenance."

Referring to the third case he reminded that dependents had been construed as persons relying on the registrants' earned income and declared: "It should be remembered that nothing in the law or the regulations requires a registrant or his dependents to liquidate their capital assets."

Hershey instructed boards reconsidering dependency cases to give the benefit of any doubt to the registrant. He added that any registrant whose classification remained unchanged by the local board after reconsideration had the right to appeal.

Hershey ordered Government appeal agents to press cases worthy of appeal when the registrant failed to do so and instructed State directors to "maintain close administrative supervision" of the liberalized policy in their States.

Induction of registrants are to be held up while their case is being reconsidered.

In another development, national selection headquarters revealed it is experimenting with a new system whereby Army induction doctors will examine registrants at the same time as selection doctors, to eliminate avoidable turn-downs at induction stations. The experiment is being carried on in Pennsylvania, New York and North Carolina.

Meanwhile the District Appeals Board sustained only four registrants out of 12 claiming deferments in disputed cases. Among the successful appellants was Pat P. McCorkle, service station operator of Board No. 22. McCorkle, who reached the age of 36, since he registered last October, was reclassified as unfit for service.

Others whose appeals were granted and the reasons for their deferments follow: Louis J. Castagneto, 22, Board 19, fit only for limited military service; Fred Ercolani, 35, Board 15, dependency, and Louis Levinson, 27, a dentist of Board No. 21, necessary occupation.

The appeals of two conscientious objectors, Idus Wilson, 23-year-old grocery clerk, of Board No. 24, and Henry Schreier, 31, Board No. 5, were referred to the district attorney's office.

Appeals of the following were refused: Thomas C. Roberts, 22, of Board No. 15; Joseph W. Richards, 28, Board No. 10; Howard R. Coleman, 25, Board No. 18; Edward S. Welch, 26, Board No. 24; Albert C. Borghi, 27, Board No. 10, and Thomas F. Keating, 26, Board No. 6.

OPM Calls for Eight Aluminum Plants

which will produce 600,000,000 pounds a year, it appeared that Government power facilities would be drawn on for the necessary electrical energy, the principal factor in aluminum production.

The plants will be located in Arkansas, the Bonneville-Grand Coulee area, upper New York, Alabama, California and North Carolina. Thus it appeared that power would come from the TVA dams, the Bonneville-Grand Coulee development, other Reclamation Bureau projects, and the New York State Power Authority.

As forecast, the plants will be Government owned.

Company Also Criticized

Thursday, a Senate investigating committee headed by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, had criticized both the OPM and the Aluminum Co. of America for the serious aluminum shortage which faces the defense program for heavy bomber and other aircraft production. The committee's report declared OPM had relied on Alcoa and "discouraged anyone else from going into the business of producing aluminum" and expressed belief that the company had represented the supply to be adequate in order to avoid competition.

In another expansion move the OPM yesterday announced its approval of a proposal of Carnegie Illinois Steel Corporation to enlarge its facilities at a cost of about $85,000,000 in order to produce an additional 400,000 tons of steel ingots annually. The expansion is part of a program of OPM to provide 10,000,000 tons additional steel a year.

Knudsen transmitted the Carnegie Illinois proposal to Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones for necessary Federal financing. The additions proposed would be at Homestead and Duquesne, Pa., and would provide steel for Navy shipbuilding.

Dr. J. C. Ball To Mark 38th Year in Pulpit

DR. BALL.

Dr. John Compton Ball, nestor of local white Baptist pastors, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will celebrate his thirty-eighth year as minister of Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A Streets Northeast. Hosts for the occasion will be William L. Schooley, of the Grand Lodge of Masons, William S. Jones, of the Naval Lodge, and P. L. Rogers, of Justice Lodge.

Dr. Ball was born in England, coming to the United States in 1870. Most of his early life was spent in Philadelphia, where he attended public schools and Temple University. He was graduated from the Crozer Seminary in 1899. In 1934 Temple University conferred upon him the title of doctor of divinity, in recognition of his distinguished service in Washington.

He is the only living man who has opened the House of Representatives with prayer under eight Speakers, beginning with the colorful "Uncle" Joe Cannon down to the late Speaker Bankhead. Dr. Ball is a member of the Washington Centennial Lodge of Masons.

Baptist Home For Children Is 26 Tomorrow

The District Baptist Home for Children, which since 1915 has spent $250,000 caring for 202 children, will celebrate its twenty-sixth anniversary tomorrow.

Originally located at 904 Newton Street Northeast, the home was later moved to Prince Georges County, Md. In 1931 its present site, 128 acres in Cedar Lane, Montgomery County, was purchased, and two dormitories were erected at a cost of $201,500.

The board of trustees—the governing body—consists of E. Hilton Jackson, C. Clinton James, William E. Schooley, George B. Bryan, Robert N. Miller, Claude Livingston and Charles Werner, and representatives from individual Baptist congregations.

Indianan to Address Laymen's Groups

The Rev. D. R. Thomas, of Indiana, will address the first meeting of the Layman's Evangelist Association's summer series on Tuesday, at 7:45 p. m. in a tent at Thirteenth and D Streets Northeast.

The meetings will contiuue through August 31 and, aside from the regular meetings, a special young people's campaign will be conducted in August, under the guidance of Evangelist Jack Wyrtzen, of New York. During one week pastors, of various denominations, will speak at the meetings; another week will be devoted to prominent laymen who will speak under the direction of the Rev. C. B. Nordland, of Chicago.

Lincoln Park Services To Begin Tomorrow

The Y. M. C. A. will inaugrate its thirty-fourth season of Lincoln Park open-air services tomorrow at 4 p. m., when the Bereans Men's Bible Class of Ninth Street Christian Church will be in charge and the Rev. Carroll C. Roberts, its new pastor, will speak. John L. Bateman will be chairman of tha meeting.

Page McK. Eichson, Y. M. C. A. religious work director, has announced that William R. Schmucker again will lead the singing, and Mrs. Margaret R. Moffat will be organist. The Rev. A. F. T. Raun, pastor of First Methodist Church, will be next Sunday's speaker.

Stafford to Be Chairman

The Rev. John W. Stafford, of Catholic University, faculty, will be chairman of the Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and K Streets Northwest, tomorrow, from 3 to 5 p. m. Another meeting, under supervision of Francis Thornton, will be held there from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

Dr. Pierce to Preach

Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church, will preach on "The Hidden Manna" tomorrow at 11 a. m. This service will open the annual series of summer union services held in cooperation with the Universalist National Memorial Church and the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

Temple Baptist Pastor Called To U. S. Army as Chaplain

NO, THIS IS NOT A "GAG" picture of the Rev. Randolph Gregory marching off to Army camp. But when we began searching for a picture to go with a story about his enrollment in the Chaplain Corps, we came upon this shot—taken when he accompanied his Temple Center "gang" on an overnight hike

Washington is about to lose one of its most popular and able young clergymen to the national emergency.

He is the Rev. Randolph Gregory, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest; founder of Temple Recreation Center there, and a newlywed.

While he was called up for duty last Thursday—he's a second lieutenant in the Field Artillery Reserves—Mr. Gregory asked that he be assigned to the Chaplain Corps, and his commission is now being arranged.

Mr. Gregory got his reserve commission in 1932 upon graduation from Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, Va., and subsequently enrolled at Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester. He came to Temple Church—his first and only pastorate—in 1935.

Visualizing the need of better serving the welfare of his community, Mr. Gregory in the fall of '37 launched the "happy hour," a Friday night program of movies and other entertainment for the underprivileged.

Then, with the cooperation of various other religious and civic and social welfare agencies, Temple Center was begun—and is still rendering an invaluable service to that section. The project is chiefly supported by the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

A "Committee for Men in Service" has been formed at Covenant First Presbyterian Church under the chairmanship of Mrs. James M. Drysdale, and tonight at 7 will provide an entertainment program for Camp Meade men in the chapel at Eighteenth and N Streets Northwest.

Mass to Open Summer Session At Catholic U.

Opening of the thirty-first anaual summer session of Catholic University will be marked tomorrow by a low Mass in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Msgr. Jordan

Celebrant will be the Rt. Rev. Edward Benedict Jordan, S. T. D., dean of Catholic Sisters College. The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, bishop of Bilta and rector of the university, will preach. A choir of nuns, directed by Sister Mary Agnesine, S. S. N. D., music instructor at Sisters College, will sing special music.

The bishop will extend a welcome to the lay and religious summer students, who have been enrolling yesterday and today. During the summer term, which opens Monday under the direction of Secretary-General Roy J. Deferari, the Most Blessed Sacrament will be on view daily in the crypt of the Shrine.

Old Church Song

The Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church Choir will present an outdoor concert of old church songs tomorrow at 5 p. m. at the Little Church of Fort Lincoln, Bladensburg Road, at the District Line.

400 From Capital To Attend Conclave On Endeavorers

Washington Christian Endeavorers—whose delegation led the International Endeavor Convention in Cleveland two years ago—will play another prominent role in the sixtieth anniversary convention at Atlantic City from July 8 to 13.

More than 400 local delegates are expected to attend, including 250 from the District Endeavor Union and 140 from the Golden Rule (colored) Union. James Richards will head the former group.

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church and Federation of Churches' president, will be among the Quiet Hour speakers. Because she secured the highest number of registrations—75—for the convention, High School Endeavor Union Member Dorothy Fowkes will have all her expenses paid.

Dean Shure To Mark 20th Year at Church

Deane Shure tomorrow will celebrate his twentieth year as director of music at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church with a program at 8 p. m. featuring his compositions, to be sung by the choirs. A reception will honor him at 9 p. m.

PROF. SHURE

He was born in Pennsylvania, is a graduate of Oberlin College, studied in Dresden, Germany, with Dr. Felix Draeseke and Dr. Alexander Wolff, and with DeBlois Rowe, London, England. He was director of music at Central University of Iowa, Clarendon College, Clarendon, Tex., and the State Teachers College of Indiana, Pa. He taught at American University from 1919 to 1925.

Mr. Shure is well-known in Washington as composer of works for organ and piano, and has written five symphonies. He is head of the Choir School at Waldenwoods, Mich. He is now especially interested in writing and preserving the "White Spirituals" of the South, two of which are being issued by a New York publisher, who requested an article on the "White Spiritual" for fall publication.

Mr. Shure's varied activities include the organization of a male chorus which sang in midwest services for several years; a children's chorus which on one occasion sang an entire program from memory on the Monument Grounds; a young ladies' chorus which sang an operetta, The "Sage of Mount Vernon" was sung by 600 public school children in Constitution Hall, 1932, under the direction of Dr. Edward N. C. Barnes, who wrote the text for Mr. Shure.

At the Mount Vernon School of Music Mr. Shure teaches voice, organ, piano, composition, harmony and counterpoint, with an average of 45 students. He estimates at least 500 students have studied there in the 20 years.

Disabled Veterans to Hear Bishop Freeman

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will speak at the eighth annual patriotic service of the Disabled American Veterans in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Ceremonies in the nave of the cathedral will precede the sermon with the massing of colors by the full American Legion National Guard of Honor. Invitations to attend have been sent to 42 patriotic organizations. The service has been arranged by the National Capital Chapter of Disabled American Veterans, under the leadership of the Rev. Penn H. Howard of Alexandria, Va., chaplain of the District D. A. V.

Herring to Introduce Bill for FBI Aid in D.C.

Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, a personal friend of the family of Jessie Strieff, found murdered on June 16, last night announced he would introduce a bill to direct the Federal Bureau of Investigation to aid the Metropolitan Police Department in solution of "heinous" crimes in the District.

The senator's announcement came a few hours after he received from Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle a reply to his request for an opinion on whether existing law permits FBI intervention in District crime investigations. Biddle said:

"Since the Metropolitan Police Department . . . is charged with the duty of detecting crimes cognizable under the District of Columbia Code, it has been assumed that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has no jurisdiction in respect to such offenses."

Any change in the present division of FBI and local police responsibility is "a matter of legislative policy for the determination of Congress," Biddle said.

Callahan to Be Probe Witness

This latest development in Congressional concern over law enforcement in the District, resulting from the Strieff case, came as Chairman William T. Schulte disclosed that Capt. Harvey Callahan of the First Police Precinct, would be the next witness before his police investigation subcommittee at its secession at 10 a. m. Monday.

"We want to know what Capt. Callahan does with the policemen under his command and why it is that we don't see more of them on the streets," Schulte declared.

Inspector James Beckett, acting police superintnedent, told the subcommittee at its first session yesterday that 111 men are assigned to duty in the First Precinct. Beckett will complete his testimony at Monday's hearing. He also disclosed yesterday:

That out of a force of 1,100 men no more than eight or ten have been discharged for inefficiency in the last 11 years. This caused Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, to observe sarcastically: "That is a remarkable record of efficiency."

That $4,500-a-year police inspectors spend a good part of their time seeing that subordinates are on their corners and tending to business during rush hours when almost the entire department is assigned to traffic duty.

That Capt. Callahan, so far as he knows, is the only member of the department who has attended the FBI police school and that he supposed this was because Washington police are trained in their own school and feel they have nothing to learn from the FBI.

That in one area of Chevy Chase, a section almost entirely residential, one policeman is required to patrol a beat of 60 blocks, a distance of approximately 5 miles.

Beckett made this disclosure when Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who has lived for five months on Chevy Chase Parkway, said that frequently he and his family come into the District to attend a neighborhood movie and that he has yet to encounter a policeman.

"I don't doubt it," Beckett replied.

"What happens to them?" asked Sauthoff. "Are they playing cards or something? In five months on a busy street like Connecticut Avenue it seems to me I should run into a policeman sometime."

Schulte evinced concern when Inspector Beckett told him he spent considerable time overseeing men on traffic duty.

"Can't you have some men under you, men you can trust, so that you, with your $4,500 a year salary, wouldn't have to do this?" Schulte asked.

"Yes, I have thought about that myself many times, but that's the law and I obey the law," Beckett responded.

Brown Gets the Blame

"Who is responsible for this regulation?"

"The major and superintendent (Ernest W. Brown)."

"If we in the District have all our high-ranking officers out looking at traffic cops we are in a bad shape," said Schulte.

"I haven't been assigned to put in people's coal, but I expect to any minute," Beckette observed later.

Beckett said that the average policeman comes on duty at 8 a. m., and, if he doesn't have to go into court, usually is given a batch of summonses, notices of driver's license revocation, and other legal papers to serve on persons living on his beat.

"Then," said Beckett, "if he has any time left he has to check up on his beat—disorderly houses, gambling and so forth. He's responsible for violations of between 11,000 and 12,000 laws."

Schulte declared that policemen should be relieved of the duty of serving summonses, assignment to the hack inspector's office, the Alcohol Beverage Control Board and to clerical duties.

Wants Civilian Officers

He said civilians should be given sufficient police authority to perform these tasks (Beckett said 21 policemen are assigned to non-police duties) and declared:

"The man on the beat should be given an opportunity to know every apartment on his beat, every janitor, every phone operator and, then, in a case like the Strieff case the man on the beat would be a most valuable man."

"One hundred per cent correct," said Beckett.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, disagreed sharply with Schulte and Beckett on the subject of summonses. "Any man with any kind of police authority is a policeman," Dirksen said.

What the Police Department needs, Dirksen said, is an over-all concept of its task, a plan "that brings clearly to a policeman's mind what his job is."

"It is possible for a man to know only one-half of 1 per cent of all the laws and still be an awfully good policeman," he added.

Dirksen and Beckett agreed that between 85 and 90 per cent of misdemeanors and felonies in the District are committed by transients and both were puzzled to know why more District policemen haven't taken advantage of FBI training which, it was pointed out, is free and within bus or street car ride of every member of the department.

Ardor Isn't Dampened

"Does the major or any superior officer dampen the ardor of men who might want to go to the FBI school?" asked Dirksen.

"Absolutely not," Beckett answered.

By questioning Beckett, Sauthoff learned that the Police Department makes no check to see if the motorist whose license is revoked actually stops driving his car.

Representative McMillan (Democrat), of South Carolina, told Beckett that a few days ago he saw a man in an auto block a streetcar for 15 minutes at Eleventh Street and Florida Avenue Northwest. When he asked the motorman why he didn't make the man drive out of the way, the motorman told him he was afraid he wouldn't be able to get police protection.

Two Identify Suspect in Assault Case

paraded on the platform. As soon as the woman saw McKenzie, she too, leaned toward a detective and whispered to him.

Keck then repeated the previous procedure and asked whether anyone in the room identified any of the men in the group. Mrs. Abarca, visibly nervous, said:

"Yes; the second man." He was the suspect.

Keck then asked her to put her finger on him. She arose and walked somewhat reluctantly toward him.

'Don't be afraid!" said Keck.

Still nervous, Mrs. Abarca approached the suspect and put her finger on him.

"Are you sure, that's the man?" asked Keck.

Mrs. Abarca put her hand to her throat. She could barely talk.

"Yes," she said, in a low voice.

McKenzie had lost some of his bravado. He became nervous and toyed with his straw hat. After he was led to the detention room, he began to shake and suffered a fit of nervousness.

Both women left headquarters soon after, obviously relieved that the ordeal was over.

Three Charges Preferred

McKenzie was charged with two cases of robbery ond one of rape at 9 p. m. last night. Mrs. Abarca's name appears on the blotter opposite the rape and one robbery charge, while Miss Harper's appears as the complainant in the second robbery charge.

The man, who lives at 530 Hobart Place Northwest, was born in Washington and, police said, has no criminal record. There are only two minor charges against him—both for traffic violations. He was employed as baker's helper in a Seventh Avenue bakery shop and told police he worked nights, getting off at about 3 or 4 a. m.

Keck said later:

'Now there is no question about this being the man. I'm going home and go to bed."

Meantime, police are searching for another room McKenzie may have had. They believe he may have had hid the stolen money and the nickel-plated gun there.

Before identification was made by the two women, approximately 20 persons, victims of recent holdups, viewed a number of suspects in two separate groups. One woman picked out a colored man and said he resembled the bandit who entered her place recently but she could not positively identify him.

In the meantime detectives continued to pile up evidence pointing toward the man's guilt. They shattered his alibi with a signed statement from his girl friend.

He had told detectives he spent last Tuesday, during the time Mrs. Abarca was attacked in a cleaning and dyeing establishment in the 3400 block Fourteenth Street Northwest, with the girl. She denied his visit.

After questioning McKenzie for more than two hours following the identification, police said he now denied his previous story that he was with his girl friend when the crimes were committed. He now insists he was at his home and declares that his father will bear this statement out.

He told detectives that he reached the ninth grade at school and now makes $16 a week at the bakery shop. He still protests his innocence and denies knowledge of any of the crimes that have terrorized Washington recently.

Brown Suit Is Found

A brown suit similar to the one worn by the man who assaulted Miss Abarca was recovered and was shown to the woman last night. She could not identify it.

Police Capt. John H. Fowler, who has a special assignment investigating the murder of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, said he did not believe the suspect had any connection with that crime. He added, however, that the man will be questioned after the attack-robbery cases are completed.

Jury Acquits Man of Attack On Daughter

A District Court jury late yesterday cleared George Hodge, 39, of charges of carnal knowledge in a case involving his 16-year-old daughter, Mary Louise.

A verdict of not guilty was brought in by an all-male jury that deliberated for nearly six hours.

At the same time the jury failed to reach a verdict on a second indictment against Hodge—an indictment charging incest. Visiting Justice Charles G. Briggle, of the Southern District of Illinois, ordered the 12 men to abandon their consideration of this indictment when the foreman reported there was no possibility of reaching a verdict.

Hodge is represented by Attorney Robert I. Miller.

Strieff Case Probers Get New Setback

Detectives investigating the brutal slaying of Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, 23-year-old War Department employe, suffered another setback yesterday when they received a negative report from the Department of Justice on 21 specimens of sand.

The specimens, collected in alleys and cellar ways in the neighborhood of the dead girl's home, 2110 Nineteenth Street Northwest, were submitted to the FBI for comparison with sand found in Miss Strieff's shoes and on her stockings.

Chemists at the Federal Bureau of Investigation reported to Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting chief of detectives, that none of the 21 specimens was the same as the sand in the shoes.

Detectives had hoped that a similarity of grains would provide them with a definite starting point in their probe. Capt. Keck was visibly chagrined at the result.

Sand submitted for comparison was collected in several apartment house cellars, apartments of two janitors and from the gutters of Florida Avenue and Nineteenth Street.

Possibility that an abandoned sedan found in Oxon Hill, Md., Thursday by a Post reporter and which bore bloodstains, figured in the murder was discarded when investigation disclosed it was not stolen until last Monday.

The blood stains, it was said, were fresh and could not have been on the upholstery of the car since June 15 when Miss Strieff was killed.

Herbert Cornwell, of Herndon, Va., was identified as the owner of the machine. He said it was stolen from the 1800 block Calvert Street Northwest, Monday. He could not identify a blue suit found in the car.

Hoover to Speak

New York, June 27 (INS).—Former President Herbert Hoover revealed today that he will make "a statement to the American people upon our situation in the war" during a Nation-wide broadcast over the red network of N. B. C. between 10::30 and 11:15 p. m., E. D. T., Sunday. He will speak from Chicago.

Bill to Keep Men in Navy Is Refused

By the Associated Press

Despite an urgent plea from high Navy officers, the Senate Naval Affairs Committee declined yesterday to approve a bill under which the Fleet's sailors and marines could be held in service beyond their term of enlistment.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, explained that committeemen felt this would be a breach of contract with the men. The committee did approve, however, a bill under which future volunteers would be placed on notice that they could be held in service after their enlistment period if Congress so decided.

Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, had said that because of the rapid expansion of the Navy, its experienced personnel was being spread out very thinly. Therefore, he said, the Navy ought to be empowered to retain men if Congress declared a state of emergency.

Before the committee acted, there had been reports that the Army might seek similar powers with respect to its men. It was uncertain, however, whether such a request would be pressed in view of the committee's attitude.

Meantime, a controversy broke out in the House Military Affairs Committee about a report which had been prepared by some members of the committee and which levelled sharp criticism at methods of obtaining strategic materials for the defense program.

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, headed a subcommittee which drafted the report after a long investigation. It was submitted to the full committee today for approval, but Administration forces objected that less than half of the committee was present and thus publication of the document was blocked temporarily.

Faddis, calling for quick publication, said:

"If it isn't made public, I'll have a few remarks to make about it and they will be worse than the report."

Lipscomb Ignores Hurts To Wed Today

LISLE LIPSCOMB

Lisle T. Lipscomb, 24, who filed a complaint of police brutality at police headquarters Thursday, will be married this morning at 11 a. m. despite a black eye he allegedly received in a free-for-all at the Tenth Precinct Station.

Charges of disorderly conduct and four traffic violations placed against him at the time of his arrest and which resulted in a fight with two detectives, were continued in Police Court yesterday until July 10.

Lipscomb's brother, Andrew Lipscomb, who is acting as counsel for the accused youth, told the court his brother was too ill to appear and requested a delay so that X-ray pictures can be made to determine the seriousness of Lisle's injuries.

The youth's cases were called before two judges yesterday. The disorderly conduct count was called before Judge John P. McMahon and the traffic offenses were presented to Judge Hobart Newman.

Andrew Lipscomb said his brother had not altered his plans to be married to Miss Ollie E. Foulk, of 1530 Spring Place, this morning. The ceremony will be performed at the Francis Asbury Methodist Church at 11 a. m.

Lisle was charged with driving the wrong way on a one-way street, passing two stop signs and speeding early Thursday morning. He said he was beaten by officers when he protested his arrest.

He made formal complaint at Police Headquarters and Inspector Edward J. Kelly and Capt. Floyd Truscott, commander of No. 10, promised him a complete probe of his charges against the policemen.

Biddle's Letter To Senator Herring

Part of Acting Attorney General Biddle's letter to Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, outlining the Department of Justice opinion on Federal Bureau of Investigation intervention in Washington crimes, follows:

"You call attention quite accurately to the fact that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has jurisdiction of the detection of crimes against the United States. Since the District of Columbia Code is an Act of Congress, a crime punishable under the provisions of the code is a crime against the United States.

"Statutes conferring investigative jurisdiction in respect to particular crimes on other agencies have been construed as creating exceptions to the general investigative jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, since the functions of the latter comprise the investigation of offenses against the United States generally, without enumerating any specific crimes.

"For similar reasons, since the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia is charged with the duty of detecting crimes cognizable under the District of Columbia Code, it has been assumed that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has no jurisdiction in respect to such offenses.

"Whether or not there should be any change in respect to the foregoing distribution of functions is, of course, a matter of legislative policy for the determination of the Congress.

"It would seem, however, inadvisable to confer coordinate jurisdiction over the detection of the same offenses on two investigative agencies. One or the other should have exclusive jurisdiction. The opposite course is likely to result, not only in a duplication of effort and expense, but also in frustrating the purpose of the investigation.

"Moreover, valuable time may be wasted under the circumstances. Consequently, it would seem that whatever investigative agency is clothed with authority to investigate specified crimes, such agency ought to have exclusive jurisdiction in the premises."

Dr. Rosenberg's Laboratory Provides Clews in Assault

Physician Is Often Able to Aid Police In Crime Solution

DR. RICHARD ROSENBERG
District's "Crime Doctor"

A crime detector who might have sprung from the writings of Arthur Conan Doyle or Ellery Queen yesterday shed new light on the rape-robbery cases that have kept upper Fourteenth Street in an uproar this week.

Laboratory analyses made by Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner, yesterday supplemented the first tests which police said revealed stains on the clothing of the 21-year-old colored suspect identified by Mrs. Vada Abarca as the man who raped and robbed her in a cleaning concern on Fourteenth Street Tuesday.

Dr. Rosenberg would not say yesterday whether his tests had established the guilt or innocence of the suspect, explaining that police did not want the information divulged. That the toxilcologist had discovered some clews, however, was evidenced by his statement that in only one recent case—that of the raped and garroted Jessie Strieff—had he failed to find some evidence directly or indirectly leading to solution of the crime.

Volunteered His Services

This record of Dr. Rosenberg is remarkable when one considers that a little over seven years ago he knew nothing of the science of microscopic analysis. At that time the doctor, a general practitioner, was appointed deputy coroner for the District.

Since there was no physician to cooperate with the local police in solving crime through science, Dr. Rosenberg decided that he would fill the need. With no other background than reading about the subject, and the confidence that he could do the work, he volunteered his services.

Soon police brought every unsolved case that fell in the province of scientific investigation to the small, graying doctor. Murders, rapes, robberies, hit-and-run mysteries, and homicides were subjected to the limelight of Dr. Rosenberg's scrutiny, with outstanding results. The analyses became a hobby of the doctor's, and he added necessary instruments to the existing equipment at the Morgue, paying for them himself.

When the new Morgue was built not long ago, some $3,000 was appropriated to outfit a crime laboratory for Dr. Rosenberg. The new equipment has helped immeasurably, the doctor says, but there is still an urgent need for several instruments necessary to solving certain types of crime by science. A spectograph, violet ray machines, and a colorimeter, to mention some of the equipment, are needed badly.

He Clears Suspects, Too

The seemingly insignificant materials in which Dr. Rosenberg finds the lurking clews to solve crime in Washington include stains of all kinds, secretions, fibers, dust, pocket debris, and fingernail scrapings. No stain or grain or speck is too small for the doctor's investigations, and often minute particles of tiny stains change a case from "unsolved" to "solved," or a verdict from "guilty" to "innocent."

pally for new buildings to be erected chiefly in defense-congested areas of the city.

Metropolitan Police, $83,440, to add 44 new men to the 54 increase in the force voted by the House, and to provide for additional two-way radio equipment.

Fire Department, $57,790, chiefly for personnel for a new truck company at No. 19 Engine House, Twenty-eighth Place and Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Health Department, $337,880, with $120,000 for new Northwest Health Center and $100,000 for quarters for interns and physicians at Gallinger Hospital, the largest items.

Public Welfare, $230,315, including $100,000 additional for public assistance and $50,000 for a revolving fund to make possible District participation in the Department of Agriculture food stamp plan.

Highway Department, $218,580, with restoration of $100,000, knocked out of estimates by the House, for studies and land approaches for a new Anacostia Bridge. The Senate bill also eliminated a House prohibition against use of funds for operation of the District's $100,000 street-material testing laboratory.

Water Department, $25,000 for extension of the water distribution system.

The Senate voted to instruct its conferees to insist on retention of Senate amendments. In addition to Overton, conferees named were Senators Glass, Thomas of Oklahoma, Nye, O'Mahoney, Bankhead, Reynolds and Holman.

The House named as conferees the membership of the District Appropriations Subcommittee—Representatives Mahon, Beam, Harrington Thomas, Houston, Stefan, Case and Lambertson.

Commissioners Favor Changing Coroner Setup

The Commissioners are in "full accord" with the proposal to abolish the District coroner's office and appoint a full-time medical examiner, Commissioner John Russell Young said yesterday, and a study of the plan already is under way.

Recalling that the medical examiner's post was suggested by the city heads in the municipal reorganization bill which failed to receive Congressional approval, Young said a similar request again will be made.

House Group Backs TVA Compromise Bill

The House Military Affairs Committee approved yesterday a "compromise" bill embracing an amicable settlement of the long-standing controversy between the Tennessee Valley Authority and the General Accounting Office.

Under the terms of the measure (H. R. 4010) the expenditures of the Federal power agency would be brought squarely under the Budget and Accounting Act for audit and settlement by the Comptroller General, Lindsay C. Warren.

Policy Toward Russia

How the United States could aid Soviet Russia in its struggle with Hitler is not altogether clear. Neither space nor time is helpful. The ports wherethrough the U. S. S. R. receives supplies are either physically or diplomatically hard of access. The Black Sea, the Baltic, the Arctic ports—these appear to be sealed by Nazi sea and air power. Vladivostok is about the only port of entry left to the Soviet. It is a long way to Vladivostok, and Vladivostok is a long way from the fighting front. Moreover, it is unlikely that there are any supplies to spare for the Soviet Union. Most of the munitions and other material which we do not reserve for ourselves are already pledged to Britain and China. We have, finally, no spare shipping for exports to the Soviet. That any aid to Russia is largely academic is indicated in the President's offhand reference to it and in the lack of any application for lend-lease aid from the Soviet Embassy.

Yet a sort of gesture of aid has been made to Moscow, and Mr. Welles underlined it in his interview with Ambassador Oumansky Thursday. The Soviet Union may apply for the benefits of the lend-lease authority; its funds in the United States are now withdrawable freely; and there will be no invocation of the Neutrality Act in making the waters around Vladivostok a combat area and therefore unavailable to American shipping. Thus the President is keeping the record straight by keeping the spotlight upon our overriding anti-Hitlerism. Let it stay at that. Since little help could get to the Soviet Union anyway, it is difficult to see why any action should be taken under the lend-lease authority even if an application should come from Moscow. Any such aid would be bound to make for mental confusion among the American people. It would not be easy to persuade them that aid to the Soviet is in precisely the same category of self-helpfulness as aid to Britain. If our single interest in the world turmoil is to see Hitler defeated, we can serve such an interest better by doubly aiding Britain than by disbursing any aid to the Soviet Union which has only one chance in a thousand of arriving at its destination. Doubly aiding Britain does not mean only a speedup in the factories. It means the active cooperation of our Navy and air force with the British so that full advantage may be taken of Hitler's preoccupation with Russia. That is the policy indicated by the Russo-German war.

Perhaps, however, the gesture in the direction of Moscow has been made in great part with an eye on the Japanese. At any rate, it seems to have added to the prolonged headache which the outbreak of the Russo-German war has caused in Tokyo. Formerly the Japanese connived with the Russians in channeling our continental supplies to Germany. (They wanted to do the same middleman service in respect of Indonesian products.) This was good business as well as faithful service to the Axis. In these thin days the Japanese are loath to turn down a chance for making a penny, whether the penny is earned dishonestly or honestly. It is said, indeed, that some of the Japanese traders are not averse to dealing with agents for the Chungking government. But the Russo-German war has made the Japanese people, transgressors and all, suspend most of their business operations while they ponder the future of Dai Nippon. Japan has a pact with Russia. And she has an antecedent pact with Germany. Who is the friend, Codlin or Short—or, rather, who is the more potential menace? For a while the Japanese are sidestepping the dilemma by staying on the sidelines, but they may be galvanized into action of some kind when they see American or Soviet boats sailing by with munitions for the Soviet forces, and are faced—as in the event of a long war they would be faced—with a demand from Hitler to blockade Vladivostok.

What such Japanese action would be, none could predict with any certainty. But it is plain that, aside from any feeling about Moscow, the Japanese must be worried by this latest revelation of Hitler's global ambitions. Faced with the fear of an Asia entered by Germany, anxious over the spectacle of a Titan whose every assurance has proven to be a lie, the Japanese, indeed, must be deeply troubled. That their adherence to the Axis represents no bond is amply attested in the record. Hitler's demand that the Japanese begin an assault on Singapore has been ignored, and any demand for the blockade of Vladivostok might be equally ignored. It is not too fanciful to hope that sooner or later the Japanese may be seeking to wind up their adventure with Mr. Hitler and to seek peace in China. Perhaps that is looking too far, but the best way to promote such an end is by demonstrating to the Japanese not only that the preservation of Chinese sovereignty is our unshakable policy, but that it is also our inflexible resolve to bring about the defeat of Hitlerism, as has been shown again since the Russo-German war started.

Black Current

The radio message of Pope Pius XII Thursday to the great National Eucharistic Congress at St. Paul was perhaps the most somber and eloquent statement he has yet made upon the condition of the world. He warned his listeners that Christianity is almost everywhere upon the defensive, and that the time may be close at hand when its practice will again demand the greatest heroism of soul. Christian culture, said the pontiff, is being swept away by "a current of black paganism" stronger even than that "mighty current which sweeps down the Mississippi River." In the United States, to be sure, the church still enjoys the fullest freedom, and still flourishes. Here the principal struggle of the Christian is still with the evil tendencies within himself. But elsewhere, said the pontiff, there is external persecution; elsewhere "the church is being persecuted in some of its members so artfully that it is impossible to tell how far reaching its effects may be."

The papal address was, of course, wholly a religious exhortation. But at a time when political issues cut squarely across our moral and spiritual life, the pontiff's words will be searched for possible relationships to these issues. Especially will there be a quest for their relationship to the strange new phase of the world struggle. It would seem probable that in his references to those "who are called upon to suffer for the faith the physical and mental anguish of Christ's passions" the Pope had in mind the Polish and German Catholics. He must have been thinking of the friars falsely and cold-bloodedly accused of immoralities, and convicted on manufactured evidence for purposes of internal propaganda; the priests and laymen who fought the pagan proselytizing of the Hitler youth; the courageous bishops who denounced the now evidently well attested slaughter of innocent incurables. He must have likewise been thinking of Russia. There the persecution of Catholics, Orthodox and sectaries alike, though scarcely artful, has been brutal, bloody and complete. Moreover, the Russian persecutions are of much longer duration, and are much better known to the outside world.

But of all the artfulness in the badness of the world, the choicest specimen may be about to come. The latest tenor of the Nazi propaganda indicates plainly the hope that Hitler's new crusade to save "Christian civilization" in Europe may find some sympathetic response among American Catholics. To that extent the campaign may diminish enthusiasm here for the defeat of Germany. It is even possible that this change in propaganda has been accompanied by some diminution or suspension of the more direct persecution of Catholics within the Reich. For all these reasons the further message which the Pope is to broadcast from the Vatican Sunday to "the entire world" on "divine Providence in human affairs" will be awaited with breathless interest.

Sour Parallel

As a sign of fealty to his overlord in Berlin, Mussolini has ordered the dispatch of an Italian expeditionary force to the eastern front. In view of the Italian military record in Greece, Libya and East Africa, the effectiveness of this gesture of support in behalf of the Nazis can be discounted in advance. Indeed, it is possible to surmise that the condition imposed by Hitler on Mussolini in return for permitting the Italian expeditionary force to fight Russia is that this force be kept as small as possible, so as not to get in the way while the German and Red armies fight it out.

There is, however, a symbolical significance to Mussolini's gesture which students of history will be quick to perceive. For this is the second time Italy has joined in a war against Russia. The last time was in 1855, when Count Cavour, then premier of Piedmont allied his tiny kingdom with Great Britain and France in the Crimean war. He did so not because Piedmont had any direct stake in the war but only because he wanted to assure the Italian people a place and a voice at the conference table at the end of the war. It was sheer power politics, and nothing else, though its purpose was to advance the cause of Italian unity by winning to partitioned Italy's side the support of powerful allies.

Now, 86 years later, the work done by Cavour as well as by Mazzini and Garibaldi and the other leaders of the Risorgimento has been undone. Italy today is, even more than she was in Cavour's day, a conquered nation. There is not even a Piedmont around which the forces of Italian freedom can rally. By sending a Piedmontese army to the Crimea, Cavour sought to translate the hope of Italian unification into a reality. By sending an Italian expeditionary force to eastern Europe, all that Mussolini can hope for is to preserve what little is left of Italy's shadowy sovereignty and her independence.

British Assets

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones announces that he is "considering" a loan to the British government secured by British-owned investments in this country. If the plan goes through, it would provide the British at once with dollars to make payments on contracts placed here before passage of the lease-lend bill. Such an arrangement would be advantageous from the standpoint of both nations. It would obviate the need for disposing of British-owned factories, securities, etc., at forced sale in a buyer's market; the RFC would be taking little risk in making a loan adequately secured by British-owned collateral; creditor firms here would be paid more promptly. At the same time Britain would be demonstrating her willingness to sacrifice her dollar holdings in order to meet outstanding obligations. That is a point which Secretary Morgenthau has constantly stressed—no doubt rightly—since aid to Britain was originally urged on the ground that British resources were insufficient to pay for needed supplies. It would not look well, therefore, for the British to hold onto valuable American properties, after aid had been voted. Neither, however, would it look well for the United States to permit its own citizens to profit at the expense of a hard-pressed people whose fight we regard as our own. There has been some criticism of the terms of sale of the American Viscose Co., for example—a feeling that the British got the little end of the bargain. True or false, we don't want to invite such criticism. For it tends, if ever so slightly, to destroy the mutual confidence upon which cooperation for joint defense must be based. For political as well as financial reasons, therefore, liquidation of British investments here by the loan route seems preferable to outright sales.

White Hope

To thousands of White Russians scattered from Shanghai to Paris the crazy pattern of the war now brings new hopes, new fears. For close to a quarter of a century the abiding and natural passion of many of these political exiles has been to return one day to their homeland. Whether Hitler's advance into Russia will hasten, delay or postpone indefinitely that day, none can say. All that is clear to them—as, indeed, to many Americans—is that the Soviet regime must be ousted and American help must not be sent to sustain it. Beyond, there is only the hope that the Russian people can accomplish the seemingly impossible—that is, defeat the Nazis and overthrow Stalin. For it seems clear that no Russian who truly loves his country, no matter how badly he may have been treated by its officials, will favor a German victory.

Yet White Russians have also to consider the possibly beneficial results of a German victory insofar as their own personal fortunes are concerned. Stranger things have happened than this—that the Nazis might, after their fashion, establish a puppet government headed by Russians now in exile. Grand Duke Vladimir, pretender to the Russian throne and living under German surveillance in Paris, would undoubtedly be one candidate. Whether he could be prevailed upon to accept the throne is another matter. And whether White Russians nominally loyal to Vladimir would return to a Nazi-dominated Russia, even if assured personal safety and restored property, is also questionable. Nazi guarantees have never been worth much, and they will probably be worth less in Russia than anywhere else should the enraged proletariat get out of hand. For the time being, then, the White Russians' chief consolation seems to be in the not very satisfying historical fact that no foreigners have succeeded in ruling Russia since the Tartars were driven out in the sixteenth century.

THE DARKER ROOT

I am the darker root,
Deep, deep down in American soil.
I send the whitened spring
To the heavy bough,
And call the tired singer to my arms.
I keep America proud of me
By forever growing strong and beautiful.
Black as ebony,
Strong and pure as a darker people,
I send the leaves scattering
In all directions
By calling back
All strength from above;
For,
I am the deep, dark root
Growing stronger, growing deeper
Year by year.
Dark and strong
I am scattered far and wide—
Deep in American soil.

Immediate War

America must go to war now. We must do so because fighting is the only means left to us to preserve our independence.

Germany's policy clearly is world conquest. And the attack on Russia is but another step in the vast program Germany has for 50 years been planning. Unless we throw our entire strength into the battle against Hitler now, we can look forward to the time within a few short weeks when the Soviet will have been smashed and every port, every air field, every munitions factory, every airplane plant, every shipyard, every resource on the European continent will be at Germany's complete disposal for the immediate domination of the Near East and all of Africa, and for a speedy and murderous onslaught on England. The rest of Asia, too, will fall to Germany and her ally, Japan, which, like Germany, is ruled by a war party and imbued with insatiable lust for conquest. The slavering beasts of prey will then turn on us in full force without delay.

Hitler, after all, has often expressed Germany's utter contempt for the intelligence, the honor and the courage of the American people. In the face of that unconcealed contempt, can any American still remain blind enough to believe that a victorious Germany, allied with Japan, armed to the teeth, led by ruthless and ambitious fanatics, and convinced of American decadence, will hesitate to attack the country whose natural resources are the envy of the world?

The proposition is no longer peace. War is inevitable. Our only problem now is how swiftly we can strike the aggressor the heaviest and most disabling blows.

Message For Labor

I note with interest the recent statement by C. F. Fichtner, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in which he states: "In an 'all-out' national effort, sacrifices must be demanded of all business, large and small. . . . A modern war cannot be waged without everyone in the end being poorer."

How true that statement is and how little our citizens realize it, with labor sitting down and permitting Communists, Nazi Fifth Columnists, cheap thugs, strong-arm men, gangsters and panders to lead them along the paths of treason and downright anti-Americanism. Bayonets are the cure. And they should be brought into play immediately with a general reduction of wages and prices.

No intelligent person will question the basic patriotism of American labor, omitting the crooked leaders that bait most of the members. Neither will any man be unduly criticized if, under threats of bodily harm to himself or family from labor's organized gunmen, he refuses to cross a picket line enforced by these same trigger-men. I believe there should be no curtailment of the right to strike under ordinary circumstances; but these are not ordinary circumstances. Labor has no moral or other right to delay our vital national defense program, nor to ask at this time for increased pay or any other privileges. Labor rates no privileges in time of stress.

Labor must be either American or anti-American. Let it declare itself and act accordingly, or let the Federal Government draft it lock, stock and barrel and make it go to work for the Nation.

The Little Men

Starting late in 1939 and up until October 20, I was in Panama and in the course of my daily duty I met hundreds of the little men of Britain. To a man they wanted this war to go to a finish even though the Empire was wrecked financially. They reasoned that if they went bankrupt crushing Hitler they would still be free men with honor and would be able to look the world in the eye without being ashamed.

They all said that what they wanted most from America was planes, tanks, guns and ships. They gave the reason for the plight they are in to poor leadership. They hate the appeasers and the so-called peace-seekers who let their armed forces get in such a deplorable state. They reason that if their R. A. F. and navy and army had been up to par, there would have been no Munich.

I believe this is true, for I have never met a "bully" who would pick on a man who he thought had half a chance to defend himself.

The cry of warmonger raised against anyone in public office who believes in being prepared to defend one's own country is the cry of either a badly misinformed person or a half-wit or one guilty of treason.

I am a Regular man, having first enlisted at 18 years of age in 1918 during World War No. 1. I have over 20 years in the Army to date.

The Way Of War

Felix Frankfurter, in a recent address, reminded his audience that "the Civil War had settled slavery" and "it is fallacious to believe that war never settled anything."

It is doubtless true that individual and mass problems have been settled by force. An enraged "Maggie" may solve some domestic fracas by bouncing a frying pan on the head of a belligerent "Jiggs," just as an outraged nation may adjust certain difficulties by hurling bombs. However, there must be better ways of settling disputes, single or mass, than throwing dangerous objects at those who disagree with us.

Mr. Frankfurter fails to comment on the tragic fact that while slavery was being settled by warfare, the entire Nation was in a state of complete unsettlement and chaos. Brother was arrayed against brother; our fair land was deluged with blood; devastation and disease stalked the States; poverty gripped the soul of our Southland, and incredible hatreds were generated.

Perhaps aeons hence, human beings may reach the realization that it is better to beat swords into plowshares than to utilize them in murdering men in mass.

Thirsty Washington

Several weeks ago I had the pleasure of visiting your city as a Junior Red Cross delegate. I found Washington perfect except there aren't enough drinking fountains. I may be spoiled, because out here they are scattered generously throughout our parks, and you can find them on most busy street corners, bubbling continuously. Perhaps those of you who live in Washington don't notice it. Nevertheless, you have my sincere sympathy when the mercury soars.

Of Defeatism

There is an unfortunate brand of defeatism going about the country at the moment. It can be just as damaging to the morale of the United States as the defeatism spread by professional foreign agents, yet it is spread by patriotic Americans who are not, necessarily, even isolationists. It is the attitude that we must not do anything about this war, because "we are not prepared." We must wait, apparently, until we are prepared several years hence.

The fallacy of this argument is that it stems from a complete misunderstanding of the situation. The real battle which confronts us is the Battle of the Atlantic. If we wait until we have an immense Army and air force, the battle will have been lost, long since. If this battle is lost, it means that England is lost. If England is lost, we will have lost our main line of defense. We will, in effect, have thrown away our decision taken at the passage of the Lend-Lease Act, which we passed because we considered the survival of England necessary to our own security.

The fact that our Army is not yet trained and equipped and our air force not yet the greatest in the world, does not enter into this situation at all. What will be the use of waiting until these forces are ready, if, in the meantime, the war is lost because we did not attend to the immediate problem?

Nor do we need a two-ocean Navy for this purpose. Germany has next to no capital ships. Her submarines can be dealt with by smaller craft, which we have. Right now we are converting freighters into small aircraft carriers to cope with the bombing attacks on shipping in the Battle of the Atlantic. We can, with the forces at our disposal (plus, of course, the immense British navy and the growing British air force), hold the Atlantic safe until both we and Britain are ready to take the offensive away from Germany.

We have a simple thumb-rule of the progress of the war. That is the losses of ships. If they are being sunk more quickly than they can be built, we will know that the war is being lost. Unfortunately that situation obtains right now (losses 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 tons a year; capacity to build, England, the Dominions and the United States, about 2,000,000 tons a year, not to mention the cargoes lost). We must, therefore, take the steps to protect the ships now operating. If we do this we will have the power to hold the enemy at bay, we will have a powerful ally to help us, and we will gain precious time to bring our other forces to the required degree of strength.

LEON HENDERSON.
Rochester, N. H., June 23.

The Inglewood Strike

Over the German-Russian war the situation in the Inglewood plant of the North American Aviation Corporation seems to be forgotten. The public, I think, is interested to know what became of the huge airplane contracts which were given to the corporation. It seems that if the Government operates the plant, the contracts are void. Justice should demand such an interpretation. If the bargaining power of the laborer is suppressed (and emergency justified the suppression), no moral right exists for the corporation to make profits based on the suppression. Even compensation for the use of capital should not be permitted since the laborer too at present has no power to fight for an income that would permit the eventual restoration of his capital, his health and strength.

If emergency strikes, it should strike both sides.

The Post Impressionist

Le Bel Fersen

The story of Axel de Fersen is a standing reproach to critics of the Romantic school. Except that it is almost too melodramatic it might have come straight from the pages of Anthony Hope. Not even the intrepid Rudolph served his lady more gallantly or more unaspiringly than Fersen. Unfortunately, however, Fate did not relent and write a happy sequel, as the novelist did; his career ended upon a note almost fantastically in keeping with that dark drama in which he played such a notable part. There is, perhaps, after all, more of Euripides than of Anthony Hope in it.

Late on the evening of June 20, 1791, a heavy coach swung into the Rue de l'Echelle, behind the Tuileries, and halted opposite the door of one Ronain, a soldier, as if waiting for a fare. About 11 o'clock a woman, heavily hooded and accompanied by two children, entered the small, dark street and allowed the cocher to help her into the waiting vehicle. A little while later came another woman, also hooded, to be followed shortly by a lumbering, roughly dressed man. After a long interval a third woman came, and when she, too, had entered, the coachman touched his whip to the horses and started his rumbling equipage on its way through the sleeping streets.

Next morning revolutionary Paris was in ferment. The town was plastered with placards; on every corner street orators harangued the gathering mob. The royal family had escaped! Heavily guarded, spied on, restricted, the King and Queen and their two children, with Mme. Elizabeth and Mme. de Tourzel, had disappeared from the Tuileries.

Axel de Fersen, the "coachman," the soldierly Swede who had engineered the daring enterprise, accompanied the royal family only on the first leg of the journey. Then, at the posthouse at Bondy, at the King's insistence, he left them after a whispered goodby. Twenty-four hours later, as we know, they were to be overtaken at Varennes and brought back to the judgment of Paris. As for Fersen, that "deft, active man," says Carlyle, "drove off into unknown space." But Carlyle was wrong.

Jean Axel de Fersen was a boy not yet 19 when he came to Paris for the first time at Christmas in 1773. For almost four years he had been upon the Grand Tour, studying the art of war at the military schools of Brunswick and Strasbourg and Turin. In Paris, at the brilliant balls and masquerades of the holiday season he was received with marked favor. "Of all the Swedes who have been here in my time," wrote Count Creutz, the Swedish Ambassador, to his master Gustavus III, "he is the one who has been most welcomed by the great world." Sweden was still a power to be reckoned with in the field, and Fersen's father, Count Frederick, was marshal of the armies as well as leader of the political party "Les Chapeaux," which was strongly Francophile.

But the boy from the north was not swept from his feet by the favor of the noblesse; his conduct, Creutz reported, was eminently becoming. In a diary which he kept at the time his notes upon that resolutely frivolous society are entirely judicial. Not that he was, by any means, a prig; there is an entry which relates how he rose at 8 to engage a suit to be made for a ball at midnight at the Orleans Palace—and then, like any schoolboy, waited with mounting anxiety as the hour approached and his friends went off without him. "The ball was not," he tells us, "very lively, and only lasted until 6 o'clock; I then escaped." Only a few duchesses in gauze and taffeta shepherdess costumes remained at that hour. "As I went away I reflected that the French do not know how to amuse themselves; they have the bad habit of saying 'I am ennuied,' and that poisons all their pleasures."

But it is the entry for January 30 which engages our attention: "Started at 1 o'clock for the masked ball at the opera. It was crowded; Mme. la Dauphine, M. le Dauphin and the Comte de Provence came and spent half an hour there without their presence being noticed. Mme. la Dauphine talked to me a long time without my recognizing her. At last she let it be known who she was, and then everyone crowded round and she retired into a box. At 3 o'clock I left the hall."

Thus prosaically does he record the beginning of that romantic attachment. It was to be five years before he was to see Marie Antoinette again, but she did not forget the tall young man from the north. Indeed, she remembered him so well that there were whispers, for she was now the Queen. Fersen sought permission to go to America with the army of Rochambeau. "The Queen's eyes could not leave him during the last days and they often filled with tears," Creutz reported to his royal master. Not for another five years were they to meet again; in the meantime Fersen, with his knowledge of English, was to play a part of consequence as liaison officer between Rochambeau and Gen. Washington, and to carry out the negotiations with Cornwallis for the surrender of Yorktown. In recognition of his services Washington conferred upon him the Order of the Cincinnatus. He returned a colonel in the armies of Sweden and of France, and might have had, if he chose, the hand and the immense fortune of Necker's homely daughter, who was married, instead, to his friend and countryman, De Stael.

It was in his capacity as agent of the King of Sweden that Fersen undertook his rescue of the Bourbons; when that failed he recklessly returned to Paris to try to persuade the King to attempt it again. But even after the Queen's death he did not disappear into unknown space.

Nineteen years after a funeral procession crawled through the streets of Stockholm—the funeral of the heir to the throne. In one of the carriages a gray-haired man with a hard, soldierly face, looked out coldly at the sullen crowd. The Revolution had come to Sweden, and Axel de Fersen, grand marshal of the armies, was not greatly loved. As the procession passed the Riddenholm the mob closed in upon his carriage. Fersen, defending himself with his sword, was struck down under a shower of stones upon the steps.

It was the 20th of June.

Today And Tomorrow

Russian Policy And American Defense

IF IT WERE CERTAIN, if indeed it were probable, that the Nazi and the Soviet armies will destroy one another, it would still be dangerously unwise for the United States to sit back and relax. There would still be needed our utmost power and effort to restore some kind of order and sanity in our world. But in fact the notion that Nazi Germany and Soviet Russia will exhaust one another is wishful thinking of the most reckless sort.

LIPPMANN

Our policy and our attitude must be based not upon the gambler's hope in the highly improbable but upon a stern calculation that in European Russia the German army is much more powerful than the Russian. The measures we take now should be based on the assumption that Hitler's forces will be tied up in Russia only for a relatively short time, and that in this short time we must fortify and reinforce our position in both oceans.

THE AMERICAN POLICY should be based not on wishes, emotions, or ideologies but on the fundamental fact that we have to defend our vital interests in two oceans and that we possess a one-ocean Navy. The avowed strategy of our enemies, as set forth in the Japanese-German-Italian pact of last September, is to render the American Navy impotent in the Atlantic by tying it up in the Pacific. By this device, which has thus far been highly successful, the defense of the Western Hemisphere against the European Axis has come to depend almost entirely upon Great Britain, with no real support from our own sea power.

The position is intolerably dangerous. For if the British resistance were broken for lack of reinforcements, the American naval position in the Atlantic would be desperate, and in the effort to save it, the American position in the Pacific would have to be sacrificed. Thus our fleet, now standing guard in the Pacific, would fail to hold what it is now guarding, and it would be confronted with the infinitely difficult task of policing defensively a whole hemisphere against surprise attack in both oceans by superior forces striking from better situated strategic bases.

SINCE WE HAVE to defend ourselves with the Navy we possess, not with the Navy we intend to have in 1946, and with what forces we can create in the near future, the fundamental object of our policy must be to unlock American sea power which is now almost completely immobilized in the middle of the Pacific Ocean. We cannot afford at this critical time to have the most powerful Navy in the world, our own greatest weapon, pinned down by the diplomacy of the Axis.

It is of vital importance, to be sure, that the whole position in the southwestern Pacific—in China, Malaya, the Netherlands Indies, the Philippines, and Australia—should be made invincible. But though the American Navy, as it is now placed, has protected that position, we must ask ourselves very carefully now whether what looks like the protection of the Pacific is not becoming a snare and a delusion. It would be just that if it turned out that we had allowed this powerful fleet to be immobilized at Hawaii while the position in the Atlantic was allowed to go from bad to worse. For in that event the fleet would have to be withdrawn from the Pacific to protect this hemisphere from direct attack. Thus the fleet which is wholly occupied in guarding the Pacific would no longer be able to guard the Pacific.

A WAY MUST be found to guard the Pacific and at the same time to liberate American sea power for much freer action in both oceans. The American Navy, we must realize, is by the ingenuity of the Axis diplomacy, locked up so that at the crisis of this great struggle it may be able to do little harm to the Axis and no great good to us. Pinned down as it is in the Pacific, it is superior to Japan. But it would be unable to fight Japan if Japan struck only if the British position in the Atlantic crumbled. Then if that happened, this great Navy would have to give the Japanese a free hand while most of it rushed off to save a desperate position in the Atlantic Ocean. And with a free hand Japan would then be able to coerce us into dividing our fleet so as to get some protection in the Pacific.

This problem—the basic problem of American defense—is not at all insoluble, and indeed immense progress has been made recently towards making it feasible to solve it decisively. A system of defense, based primarily upon air power and submarines, has been organized in the region from the Philippines to Singapore, and since Japan's great and irremediable weakness is her lack of air power, the position in the Southern Pacific is not nearly so vulnerable as it was a few months ago. The firm attitude of the Netherlands Indies in negotiating with Japan reflects this radical improvement in the position.

THIS RELIEVES to a considerable degree the demands upon the American Navy. For it is no longer the only force available to check Japanese expansion southward and Japanese closing of the road to free China. This has justified such transfers of American ships from the Pacific to the Atlantic as have been recently under way.

But while there can be no question of leaving the Pacific, other moves may now be possible which will give the fleet still greater freedom of action, still greater freedom, that is to say, to go wherever it is most needed without surrendering anything of importance in the Pacific. These possibilities arise from Germany's war against Russia. For now Russian Siberia is in a position where, unless there is a collapse throughout Russia, Siberia can no longer collaborate with the Axis. If regardless of what happens in European Russia, the Russian army, air force, and navy in the Far East do not fall under Axis control, then our whole position in the Far East, that of the American Navy, of the Chinese armies, of the British and Dutch, will be greatly improved. For with the Russians in Siberia, the new defenses in the South Pacific, the reinforcement of China, and the increased freedom of the American fleet, we shall have come a long way from the days when Mr. Matsuoka signed the Triple Axis pact last September.

WHEN WE ASK ourselves what should be our Russian policy, we should not be children and fall into quarrels about words, ideologies, or vain schemes to intervene in the war in European Russia. Our Russian policy should be that of adult men asking to serve the vital interests of the United States, and that means that we should concentrate our Russian policy on Siberia: First, in order to prevent Siberia from falling under Axis control, second, as a means of stabilizing the Far East, and above all as a means of disrupting and dislocating the Triple Axis so that American sea power may no longer be immobilized.

Call For Pots And Pans

("Washington starts drive to collect pots and pans to provide 20,000,000 pounds of aluminum needed for bomber plane construction, etc."—News item.)

Search the kitchen,
Count the cans,
Check on all the
Pots and pans!
To your country's Aid, oh come
With your old
Aluminum!

II.

That old kettle—
(Hear it sing!)
May become a
Fighting thing;
That big skittle,
Can't you see?
Can help win for Liberty.

III.

Take that stewpan!
(You're not short);
It may be a
Flying fort;
That old cover
Off a pot
Can rout Nazis
Like or not.

IV.

Those two frying Pans may soon
Raid the Ruhr by Light of moon;
Any boilers
You can spare
May help take Command by air.

V.

See that coffee
Pot? Well it
May yet score a Perfect hit;
Take that teapot . . .
Who can tell?
It may give some Foeman hell!

VI.

Cocktail shaker . . .
Farewell, sweet!
You can help the Bombing fleet;
Now you join some Fighting bunch;
Goodness knows, you
Pack a punch!

VII.

Cigarette case,
And lighter, too;
Help John Bull
And see us through!
Spoons and ladles—
All such craft—
Forward march! You're In the DRAFT!

VIII.

Stewpan, broiler,
Cookie-tin;
There's a war on,
And you're IN.
Dripolater
Flee that shelf!
Take the air and
Be yourself!

Percolators,
Saucepans, all;
Don't you hear your Country call?
Washpan, join the Air Fleet great . . .
Drat those dishes—
They can wait!

5-Cent Milk Plan Skips the Gibbses

quarts: Low-income citizens who just manage to get by without going on relief or applying to WPA.

Like Mrs. Neal Thurston, whose similar plight was described yesterday, Mrs. Gibbs takes her children to the clinic at 16 D Street Northwest at regular intervals for health examinations. Each time the doctor tells the mother to feed her children milk, realizing the advice is purely academic because neither family can afford to buy it.

The Gibbs youngsters are Leo, jr., 3; Betty, 5; Evelyn, 11; Donald, 12, and Mary Ann, 13. Their father earns $25 a week as a painter. Recently he was forced by illness to lose several days' pay.

"That hurt," said the mild-mannered Mrs. Gibbs, who is not the complaining type. She agreeably furnished answers to questions but volunteered no protests of her own.

Up until a few weeks ago, Mrs. Gibbs explained, she bought a few quarts of milk weekly. Then, she said, she had to stop because of steeply rising costs of other commodities—eggs, vegetables, meats, canned goods and other foodstuffs which demanded priority on her budget.

"You see," Mrs. Gibbs declared, "I had to pay 15 cents a quart for milk. (The top store price is normally 13 cents). I suppose that is because I have to buy my groceries on credit."

If the doors of the Capital's 11 nickel milk-depots were not closed to her, she would be allowed to buy two quarts daily, under the rationing rules. These grant a half quart each day to each child under 17 and a half pint to each adult.

Children should drink a quart a day and adults a pint, according to nutritionists, but Mrs. Gibbs would be satisfied with two quarts altogether—if she could only get them at 5 cents each.

"The children like milk, too," she said. "All except Neal, that is. And he hain't had any appetite for anything lately. I'm afraid he has rheumatic heart. I'm taking him to the hospital tomorrow."

Has to Have Car

Rent on their third-floor four-room apartment at 640 North Capitol Street takes $21.50 of their monthly income. Gibbs has to have a car in his work and gasoline makes a goodly nick in the budget. The family came here in 1935 from Bluefield, W. Va.

For some reason, the three children who attend school were not included in the free lunch program for needy children. Seems no one ever got around to putting them on and the mother was too proud to ask for favors.

"Five-cent milk would be wonderful," said Mrs. Gibbs, her eyes beaming with hope when she was told the present arbitrary regulations may be relaxed so as to make her family eligible. "I would buy three quarts a day, if they would let me have that much."

It's up to the Surplus Marketing Administration of the Department of Agriculture now. On the desk of O. M. Reed, chief of the S. M. A. dairy section, reposes an urgent request by Acting Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning that the eligibility rules be liberalized.

Richmond Aviator Parachutes to Safety

Atlanta, June 27 (AP).—Flying Cadet H. C. Smith of Richmond, Va., parachuted to safety a few moments before his Army training plane crashed in a cornfield near Lake Constitution about 6 miles south of here today.

Maj. George C. Davis of Fort McPherson, where Smith was treated for a dislocated shoulder, said the flier was returning to Maxwell Field, Army training base at Montgomery, Ala., from Chattanooga, Tenn.

Unrest In Mexico

By Betty Kirk

Sowing The Seeds Of Fascism

THE FANGS of Falange Espanola are sunk deep into the body politic of Mexico. Through them flow the venom of racial hatred, religious intolerance and political corruption which rule Spain and totalitarian Europe today.

Injection of this poisonous fluid into the Mexican nation is for the purpose of undermining the Avila Camacho government, which has declared its support of Pan-American solidarity and friendship with the United States, and for sabotaging continental defense. This sowing of confusion and distrust is a characteristic Fifth Column maneuver, a familiar pattern transplanted from a Europe in chains to a New World dedicated to freedom.

The Falange organization in Mexico is complex and has as its powerful allies the Axis partners, Germany, Italy and Japan. Because of the Spanish Falangistas racial ties with the Mexicans, they now serve as the spearhead for the totalitarian drive on Mexico, but behind their capes the Germans, Italians and Japanese hide, giving full support through money, espionage and sabotage.

Actual membership in Falange Espanola is recruited from the rich and populous Spanish colony, and is estimated at between 5,000 and 10,000 men and women throughout the republic. It has a full-fledged Women's Division and Youth Group, and the total cooperation of the Spanish members of the Mexican clergy.

Head of the Falange in Mexico is Augusto Ibanez y Serrano, former waiter, who takes his orders direct from Spain. Said Senor Ibanez y Serrano in the current issue of Hispanidad, the publication of the Falange, "I am only a soldier in the rear guard of the war which has not yet closed. I am only a soldier, awaiting the orders of the Caudillo."

ASPIRANT to become Spanish Ambassador in Mexico is Dr. Angel Urraza, president of the Spanish Charitable Society. Dr. Urraza works day and night for the resumption of Mexico's relations with Spain. This is the Axis' greatest urgency here, for should Mexico's relations with Germany and Italy be broken, the Falangistas would be needed to carry on their subversive work behind the cloak of diplomacy.

The hates of Falange are closely defined in the current issue of Hispanidad. In an article titled "Our Enemies" the finger is put on: The Jew, the Marxist, the Mason, the liberal. There, in a nutshell, are found the seeds of racial and religious intolerance and of deadly opposition to all liberal, democratic ideas.

The greatest triumph which Falange has yet scored was the attendance of President Avila Camacho and members of his cabinet at their banquet given two weeks ago. He was the third Mexican President in this century to enter the Spaniards' Casino Espanol, the center of their activities. The other two who accepted the Spaniards' hospitality were Gen. Porfirio Diaz and Gen. Alvaro Obregon.

The Falangistas promptly and joyously interpreted this as semi-official recognition of the Franco government and as a prelude to resumption of diplomatic relations. They said, among themselves, when the banquet was over, "He is one of ours!" and they jeered, "What does the United States think of this triumph, when they are opposing Falange throughout the continent?"

Such glee was fully unsubstantiated, in view of the true facts of the case. President Avila Camacho accepted the invitation only on the provision that leading Spanish refugees should also be invited. The begrudging Franquistas invited them but they refused to attend. And at the banquet President Avila Camacho said firmly and clearly:

"I know that no one will attribute my presence in this traditional bosom of the Spanish family to anything but the desire to show my sympathy for all the Spanish people, regardless of factions . . . I don't know what time will be necessary for the open wounds of the Spanish civil war to heal, but I hope that true patriotism will cure them rapidly. And I am certain that the reconciliation of all the divisions of the Spanish family will encounter an understanding and affectionate ally among the Mexican people."

FOREIGN MINISTER Ezequiel Padilla, when questioned later on the subject also made the true purpose of the President's visit clear. Said he, "When the President accepted the invitation he wished to demonstrate the sympathy he feels for the Spanish people in general. But this act was completely divorced of all diplomatic character or of any official significance between government and government. Mexico does not consider that the opportune time has arrived to renew our interrupted relations with the present Spanish government."

Nevertheless, the Franquistas are jubilant and continue their campaign of burrowing deeper into Mexico's civic life. Typical of their gestures to buy favor was the recent bountiful donation of 500,000 pesos to the current anti-tuberculosis drive. Their propaganda is persistent and pernicious and is dedicated implacably to attacking the United States, democracy and continental solidarity and to extolling totalitaria and its conquests.

The most alarming of all the Falange's maneuvers is the sinking of its fangs into two native Mexican organizations which are being exploited to propagate its doctrines and subversive activities throughout the republic. These two stooge groups are the upper middle class Accion Nacional and the peasant group, Union Nacional Sinarquista.

Accion Nacional has an estimated membership of 250,000 which comprises men and women of considerable means and apparent political fanaticism. Its head is Alfonso Gomez Morin, a leading banker with a profound and impassioned hatred for the United States and all things Anglo-Saxon. He worships Hispanidad, as the Falangistas call their cult, and is one of its chief propagandists.

THE EXTENT of the Accion Nacional propaganda was proudly revealed by Senor Gomez Morin at the second national convention of the party, held here in February, when he declared:

"The chief labor of the party was spreading the ideas of Accion Nacional. Apart from the trips, the multiple local reunions, the personal job of propaganda confided to each member of the party, we distributed throughout all the republic millions of pamphlets, handbills and posters, and in spite of the government's order to prohibit the circulation of our publications, we did not suspend the distribution of the Bulletin. It has an average issue of 30,000 copies and we are still publishing it weekly, converting it each time into an organ more powerful for political action."

The Falangistas' game is also given away in the current issue of Hispanidad in an arucie called, "The Farmers, Raw Material for the World Revolution." Nothing could be franker than this, nor is there a more brutally clear example of its workings in Mexico than in the Sinarquista organization. This group, made up of backward Indian peasants in the central and northern states, now numbers a quarter million men, who are under the direct orders of the Spanish Falange and the Gestapo.

Upsurge of the Sinarquista movement, late in May, when 40,000 marching men invaded Morelia, during President Avila Camacho's attendance of the city's fourth centenary celebration, impelled the government newspaper, El Nacional to editorialize that:

"1. The Sinarquista movement is not a political party, but a movement of agitation, promoted and directed by interests radically opposed to those of the Mexican people, and with undoubted foreign origin. 2. Its immediate object is to create a condition of misery, confusion and discontent, suitable to the corrupt objectives of its hidden directors, seeking to implant a totalitarian dictatorship and overthrow the democratic regime. 3. The Sinarquistas, by exploiting religious belief, play upon the faith of the illiterate, for political ends. It is evident that the use of religious agitation for political ends constitutes an abuse of the ignorance and good faith of the believers, a prostitution of the true religious spirit, and a deliberate outlawry, used to incite those who do not know that they are breaking the law."

THE SINARQUISTA fanaticism is being fanned day and night by paid agitators to start revolution in the heart of Mexico. It is only "awaiting the orders of the Caudillo," which will be passed on by Augusto Ibanez y Serrano. And it has behind it the brains of the Gestapo, the agents of Falange, and the money of the combined Axis Powers.

Falange Espanola, conservatively estimated, has 5,000 aggressive members taking their orders from Hitler-controlled Spain. Accion Nacional numbers a quarter million discontented middle-class men and women who, though they are Mexicans despise and oppose their own liberti revolution. Union Nacional Sinarquista comprises a quarter million Indian peasants, "the Raw Material for the World Revolution."

In a nation with only 20,000,000 population, this organized minority of more than a half million, which cuts through the entire social structure, is the channel through which the fangs of Falange inject their venom into the Mexican body politic. When and how the trouble will start remains a mystery, but Mexico has been as well softened up for the conquest as Norway, Belgium, Holland and France were before her. And its threatened revolt will be the showdown for democracy in Latin America.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The New Partner

I HAVEN'T had to telephone Moscow to learn what my ideas should be on the slight change in the line-up on the other side of the world, for, unlike many of my rulers in Washington, New York and California, I observed long ago that there was no more difference between Communism and Hitlerism than between red and brown.

PEGLER

But Adolf Hitler made this war, and it is the German nation, not the Russian, which has been menacing this country, and Hitler and Germany remain the enemy as long as they are able to fight. The Germans themselves and the Communists, too, in taunting Britain for her selfishness and cowardice at Munich, have admitted unguardedly that the British didn't make the war, and certainly the same may be said for France, because her soldiers trudged to the front with laggard steps and her people had no belly for the fray.

Hitler had been arming for war for years and screaming and squalling about the injustice of Versailles, and when he was ready Stalin gave him the go-ahead—and the fight was on. If anyone wants to go back behind those events it can easily be shown that Germany was responsible for Bolshevism in Russia in the first place, having sent Lenin home across Germany in a sealed car for the sole purpose of touching off the horror, so that Russia would crumble and release the Kaiser's divisions for the west. Germany set Bolshevism in motion, then adopted Bolshevism with nationalistic trimmings as her own mode of life, thought and government and, finally, by a deal with Bolshevik Russia, was enabled to tear off on another rampage against civilization, including ours.

RUSSIA was no military threat to the United States, as I am sure Charles Lindbergh would be the first to admit, in view of his low opinion of the quality of the Russian aviation. Britain hadn't threatened us, and Italy, of course, was just a spoiled and ill-mannered brat of a country building up to a good slap in the face.

That Russia might have picked a fuss with the U. S. A., had we been neighbors, there may be no doubt, but neither is there any reason to discuss the possibility, because we weren't neighbors and Russia didn't commit any military molestation. Germany is the country which has been squinting down the barrel at this Nation, and it is written as plain as sky writing on a windless day that if Germany wins, the German empire, with its satanic cynicism, its skill, fighting power and brutal greed and with all the works and facilities of conquered Europe under her command, will attack the United States—possibly in league with Japan.

Now Germany must first lick Russia before even attempting to wind up matters with Britain, and anyone who rejects the assistance of the Russians on the mere ground that they are socially offensive and don't smell nice is taking too literally President Roosevelt's oratorical frivolity about the establishment of the four freedoms everywhere in the world. In the last war this country fought on the side of the Czar, who was generally regarded here as about the lowest form of political life, and in this one, again, the Russians have at least a nuisance value and perhaps a stronger value which should be appreciated, not spurned.

THE POINT is that Germany is the enemy—and a strong enemy—who has now robbed herself of an ally who might have been very dangerous to us in collaboration with Hitler and Japan. There is no question of Russia's domestic habits, which are low and vile, like Germany's, and which we shouldn't try to censure or reform.

After the war, if Hitler is beaten with Russia's help, and notwithstanding the obstruction of our own political prudes, nature and politics will take their course, and it may be necessary for the United States to do something real vigorous to the Communists here in the interests of internal peace and safety.

But that can wait, and the one fact to be kept in mind here now is that Adolf Hitler made this war and, if victorious, would demolish the United States. Russia happens to be a pretty good lump of meat for our team—stupid, yes, and dirty in soul and body, but far more likable than the same Russia on Adolf Hitler's side.

Prelude To War

By R. G. de Waldeck

Russo-German Relations

A QUESTION which I heard important German civil servants and high officers discuss frequently after the fall of France was: "Will it be possible in the long run to organize Russia economically without dominating her politically?" The most interesting point in these discussions was that every German admitted that in spite of their conquests in the West, Germany was still essentially interested in the economic "Ostraum" (eastern space) to the River Don. Nor did they ever fail to point out what they called the "ironical fact," that the Allies were really fighting the Russian battle, in that by fighting Germany they postponed the inevitable German-Russian settlement.

This inevitable final settlement with Russia was in the first place to give the Germans a free hand in organizing the Russian economy without political interference by Red commissars; secondly, to stop the activities of the Comintern on the European continent, and thirdly, to keep Stalin from double-crossing Hitler.

Directly after the fall of France the Germans became worried about the possibility that Stalin might double-cross them. On the day when the Russians marched into Bessarabia, I heard an important German diplomat in Bucharest voice his forebodings. He said: "Stalin is getting restless. He had figured on a long war in the west which would leave us exhausted, and instead we have an immense army free and he is afraid of a German attack. So he will try to do everything to prolong and complicate the war for us."

This German diplomat was inclined to consider the Russian annexation of Bessarabia as such an attempt and also as a sign of Stalin's distrust of Russo-German relations after the war. For the German diplomat told me that Bessarabia was promised to Stalin, but for after the war. Only, he said, Stalin failed, because "Hitler never lets himself be provoked at the wrong moment."

AS TIME went on, I found that two schools of thought concerning Russo-German relations became clearly discernible in authoritative Nazi quarters.

One school of thought emphasized the correctness with which the Russians fulfilled their economic obligations. This school believed that Stalin was a smart ruler who knew well where his bread was buttered. They were convinced that he would never let himself get into a war with Germany and that therefore his double-crossing would remain in playful limits.

This school did not want war with Russia; convinced as they were that, from a military point of view, Russia would be easy for the German army, they were afraid of the aftermath of such a war, which would leave Russia sulky and more difficult than ever to organize.

Von Ribbentrop was said to be the head of this school of thought, and the leading German economic experts and diplomats belonged to it.

But there was another school of thought which was convinced that Russia, unless militarily subjugated, would always remain a potential menace for the new order apt to sabotage Germany economically, and double-cross her politically at a moment's notice.

To this school of thought belonged that part of the Nazi hierarchy which had remained faithful to the original Nazi ideologies of the Nordic race and the fight against Bolshevism. These men—especially Hess and Rosenberg—wanted peace with England. They were convinced that a peaceful settlement with Stalin would be possible only on the basis of enormous Russian gains in the Near and Far East. Such gains, they thought, could be only at the cost of the British Empire and would block forever any hope for a negotiated peace with England.

To this war-minded school also belonged, for purely practical reasons, the German general staff. The German generals would explain that a modern soldier had to be trained like an athlete, and what was the use of letting him get soft by demobilizing him at the end of the war without beating the Russians. The German generals believed that a final settlement with Russia could only be reached by military means, anyway; so why not fight now when the German army was in top form and the campaign in Russia looked easy. "We don't even need generals for this campaign. Non-commissioned officers will do the trick," I heard one German general boast.

HITLER was said to veer more and more to the war-minded school of thought. I believe that the matter had been largely decided in favor of war as early as last November, at the time of Molotov's visit to Berlin. I heard at the time, from two very reliable German sources, that Molotov had offered to enter the Three-Power pact but had been refused on the grounds that such a pact would close every avenue to a negotiated peace with England, because Stalin's demands in the Near and Far East were exorbitant. I believed at the time that this version was in the way of German propaganda and am still inclined to believe so. But part of the tale was true, namely, that Molotov had become very cool in the course of the Berlin conversations and had even refused to listen to German demands of closer cooperation and the calling off of the Comintern in Europe.

Though German economic experts and diplomats worked hard at the preservation of a peaceful settlement and brought about a bigger and better economic pact in January, the best informed American military observers in Europe were from this time on convinced that Germany would make war on Russia. Nor did they believe that such a war would in any way influence German plans as to the invasion of England, if and when Hitler decided upon it. They explained that the German air force and army which was to operate in England was entirely a separate, independently functioning force.

A German war against Russia will prove rather a popular enterprise on the European continent. Italy and Spain had always looked askance at the German-Russian pact, and tolerated it only in terms of military necessities. The France of Vichy is all for fighting Bolshevism; Rumania and Finland have their own axes to grind.

THE SITUATION is vastly different for Germany proper. Contrary to what has been said about it in the democracies, the Russo-German pact was about the most popular move Hitler has ever made. Except for the believers in the old anti-Bolshevik Nazi Party line, the German people were genuinely delighted with the pact, not only because it was at the time the practical thing to do, but because the Germans, especially the younger generation, felt the inner logic of a pact which emphasized the unity of the "two great revolutions."

This sentiment was stressed by the German propaganda which constantly harped on the slogan of the "revolutionary war" which the "young revolutionary nations" were waging against the "old capitalistic nations." This slogan was all the more effective with the Germans as the German propaganda hastened to add that the revolutionary armies always won their wars because they were dynamic.

There can be no doubt that this new Nazi slogan of the "revolutionary war" and the "revolutionary nations" was more attractive to the Germans than the old slogan of the Nordic race. Thus the invasion of Russia, whether it succeeds or not, at least bereaves the Nazi regime of its most dynamic slogan for this war.

Stage Show Tops Bill At the Earle This Week

Stabile Band, Gracie Barrie and "Rochester" Stars of a Variegated and Colorful Revue; "Adventure in Washington" Misses Fire

"ADVENTURE IN WASHINGTON." Columbia picturization of a story by Jeanne Spencer and Albert Benham, adapted to the screen by Lewis R. Foster and Arthur Caesar, costarring Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce, with Gene Reynolds, Samuel S. Hinds, Ralph Morgan, Vaughan Glaser, Charles Smith, Dickie Jones, Pierre Watkins, J. M. Kerrigan, Tommy Bond, Billy Dawson, Charles Lind and Mary Currier. Directed by Alfred E. Green. At the Earle Theater.

IT IS THE STAGE SHOW at the Earle this week. The melange of songs, dances, comedy, acrobatics and orchestral tootlings, "broken in" yesterday under Harry Anger's acute eye and the title of the "Rochester Unit," is packed to the bursting point with talented specialists and the sound background—in more senses than one—of Dick Stabile's Orchestra. It will gather speed and momentum as it goes along. "Adventure in Washington," the screen feature for the new week, like "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," is another of Columbia's misconceptions of how officialdom functions in the Capital and will prove less impressive to local audiences than to those of any other city in the country.

It is a small but proficient band that Dick Stabile has brought to town. The conductor is a genial and slyly humorous young man who works agreeably and unobtrusively, stepping out of character occasionally—or into it, as the case may be—to demonstrate his virtuosity on the saxaphone, from which, incidentally, he wheedles what is said to be the highest note ever coaxed from that instrument, this year celebrating its 100th anniversary, thanks to the inventive genius of Anton Sax. But the orchestra is perfectly willing to share honors with the considerable list of "acts" which it presents.

Shirley Gaye is a songstress of pleasant voice and bearing whose numbers went over nicely at yesterday's first performance. She is followed by that astonishing young blonde, contortionistic dancer, Ruby Ring, who now and again sits on the back of her own head and then executes upside-down feats on a Bill Robinson flight of steps that just simply can't be done. Walton and O'Rourke lean a little to the ribald side in the manipulation of their gifted marionettes and Stabile then recruits a superb saxaphone choir from among his instrumentalists. And so to the headliners.

Stars Prove That They Are

Gracie Barrie—Mrs. Dick Stabile in private life—for the first time in several seasons returning to the stage she decorated so long as mistress of ceremonies, in the wake of Maxine Doyle, has developed into a real artiste during the period of her absence. Her splendid natural voice has been modulated and refined to delightful tonal quality and its use perfected to a point where no suggestion of flaw remains. Gracie could have held the stage indefinitely yesterday afternoon.

Closing the bill, comes Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, assisted on this visit by three associates of his own race—a comic stooge, an exceptional bass-barytone and an ample feminine dancing partner who steamed up a terrific amount of laughter. However, it was "Rochester" the capacity house wanted and it was "Rochester" they got in a succession of routines that obviously were as new to him as they were to those out front. Not too sure of his material, until he got into his dances, Mr. Benny's favorite valet nevertheless wowed the customers and will do so increasingly as the week goes on. If this unit remains intact, Brother Anderson has himself a show.

It Should Be Called "Misadventure"

Jeanne Spencer and Albert Benham, authors of the original story, and Lewis R. Foster and Arthur Caesar, who adapted it to the screen, approached "Adventure in Washington" under a complete misapprehension. Apparently, it was their notion that the page boys of the United States Senate comprise a sort of governmental "Boys Town," devised to impart to the legislative processes of the Nation the duties of a reform school. In a moment of weakness, Senator Coleridge appoints a tough kid from a rowdy ward back home as a Senate page to pay a political debt. This Marty Driscoll finally sees the light, to be sure, but by way of experiences that to Washington eyes are grossly fraudulent. The Senator is trapped in much the same sort of goings-on by piratical business interests and the flip pestering of a girl radio commentator. So he falls in love with her, or something. Too bad for Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Gene Reynolds, et al.

The newsreel is particularly interesting, with its heavy accents on home defense, our new Army and close-ups of the vitiated Vichy government of ravaged France. An especially amusing Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy adds another touch of fun to an oddly unbalanced bill.

Rudy Vallee, Ann Miller Take 'Time Out for Rhythm' at Met

By Richard L. Coe

"TIME OUT FOR RHYTHM." Columbia picturization of a play by Alex Ruben, adapted to the screen by Bert Granet, Edmund L. Hartman and Bert Lawrence, with Rudy Vallee, Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane, Allen Jenkins, Joan Merrill, Richard Lane, Stanley Andrews, Brenda and Cobina, the Three Stooges, Six Hits and a Miss, Eddie Durant's Rhumba Orchestra and Glen Gray's Casa Loma Band. Music and lyrics by Sammy Cahn and Saul Chaplin. Directed by Sidney Salkow. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Of course it's only June and before the snow flies there may be a worse film than the Metropolitan's "Time Out for Rhythm." But it's downright sadistic to think so.

Implicated in this unholy mess, masquerading as "entertainment," are the usually wiser Rudy Vallee, the amusing but consistently ignored Ann Miller and a handful of other folk who are either bored or boring, among them the Three Stooges, Brenda and Cobina, Rosemary Lane and Allen Jenkins.

Listlessness is but one of the film's faults. Heaven knows, musicals with a Broadway background, in which the cute understudy steps in to save the show from the grasping paws of a selfish star, have been made palatable time and again simply by clever handling. And in "Time Out for Rhythm" there's not an atom of cleverness nor a split grain of wit.

In the midst of such banality, it's only natural to let one's eyes wander over the sets. Like the filmplay, they are unbelievably tasteless, rooms in the worst gunman metier, satin walls and unlikely flower pots. The girls' costumes are the shiniest gauze. Even the soundtrack seems early Vitaphone.

Pity Ann Miller

Probably the true Samaritan would be generous enough to call "Time Out for Rhythm" a "loosely linked series of variety turns." Glen Gray and his Casa Loma Orchestra have trick lighting for "novelty." Those abysmal Three Stooges, who seem to fancy themselves as the morons' Marx Brothers, are likely to pop up any time with their grimy tricks. Brenda and Cobina, who seem funny enough with Bob Hope's radio program, so long as you don't hear them too often, are almost as bad as the Stooge people. Joan Merrill proves to be a sultry-voiced biped with a mask for a face. Vallee is beset with the feeblest lines ever given a musical comedy juvenile and he recites them in a nasal monotone. Allen Jenkins has never had so much to look glum about. But even a Samaritan loses patience.

The sad situation of brunette, dancing Ann Miller is brought into embarrassing focus in this dreary charade, which actually threatens to look up a bit when first she taps into view; though not really. She sings and dances with likable style, but the handicap's a killer.

Songs? Yes, there are a couple of the tinkly sort that may hold their own for a time in the juke boxes. Besides the title number, there's one with words that go like this: "I think of you and I quiver. I tingle. I glow. As if I didn't know." "The Gentleman Prefers to Dance" also is in the score.

Also on the Metropolitan screen is a Leon Errol two-reeler, "Polo Phony," quite as unfunny as the feature. The FHA film in which Frank Craven dramatizes the advantages of this governmental agency; a Porky cartoon and the Paramount newsreel complete the bill.

LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 27.

Jesse Lasky, the veteran producer whose newest hit is "Sergeant York," was in the Stork Club last night, reminiscing about movie pioneering. He told of 1913, when Cecil B. de Mille, who wrote the vaudeville sketches which Lasky was producing, prepared to go to Mexico to find, in the expected revolution, the fortune which the entertainment business as yet had not provided . . . Lasky's brother-in-law, Sam Goldwyn, suggested a venture into the infant industry of movie production. At the Lambs Club, they found their star—Dustin Farnum—who agreed to appear in the movie version of "The Squaw Man." Lasky decided to make the movie in Flagstaff, Ariz., because once—when he managed Herrmann the Great—the show had been held over for two days. Farnum, de Mille and the technicians therefore entrained for the West.

CECIL B. DE MILLE

The next week, Lasky received a wire, sent from California. It was from De Mille, who reported: "Flagstaff unsuitable. I've found another place which will do." A place called Hollywood. Can rent a barn for $75 a month. Please wire approval" . . . Lasky summoned Goldwyn, and there, in his office, was held the first directors' meeting in motion pictures. They decided to approve of de Mille's site. "Approve rent barn in Hollywood for $75 a month," was the cautious wire they sent—a message which brought countless millions into the pockets of realtors, and created an enduring industry, third largest in America—"but take it on a month-to-month basis."

Somerset Maugham is revealing the story of the last time he saw Maurice Ravel, the composer of "Bolero" . . . Ravel told Maugham of his great admiration for Abe Lincoln—how he had read all the Lincoln biographies, and had become so impressed with the life of the Great Emancipator that he hoped to compose some music dedicated to Lincoln . . . "His Gettysburg address—now there was a great speech. I'm going to make it into a tone-poem," Ravel vowed. "It would be the first expression of a faith—an ideal. By the way—how does the first line of it go?"

Mike Romanoff is undisturbed by the White Russians' hope that now, at last, the Romanoff dynasty may be returned to a restored St. Petersburg. Mike has abdicated; he's becoming an American citizen . . . Lanny Ross was the star entertainer at the party given by the Laskers this week, for Wendell Willkie. In honor of Niles Trammell and David Sarnoff, the radio chieftains, Ross sang "There's a Fly in the Ointment"—directed against Jim Fly, head of the F. C. C. . . . Billy Rose, who now owns art-treasures as well as a home in swanky Beekman Place, refers to himself as "the new Mr. Rose"—and then adds "But I don't like the guy."

On the recent day when loyal Netherlanders in other lands celebrated the birthday of Princess Juliana, the Dutch Nazis remained at their posts at station NSB, in Leyden—prepared for any disturbances. A phone-tip notified them that a demonstration for the refugee Princess was being held by a group of students in a nearby garage. The officials rushed there and found the doors locked . . . They forced open the doors, and out streamed hundreds of cats, each with an orange bow around its neck, each scattering throughout the ancient Dutch city—each bearing the symbol that the House of Orange still endured in the minds and hearts of loyal folk in Holland.

Get Chairs To Fit Place And Purpose

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Goldilocks isn't the only lady who is particular about chairs that are just right. But too many of us don't bother to try on our chairs to see which ones are too big or too hard, too little or too soft. If we did take the trouble we'd discover that their is a chair for every place, purpose and person, and so we'd have more different sorts of chairs rather than a bunch of huge overstuffed pieces that crowd the room and don't really suit all its seating requirements. Not that heavy upholstered pieces aren't right—of course they are and nothing is quite so comfortable—but they needn't be positively obese.

Chummy Seat

If it's a sociable room, for instance, where you entertain a lot at tea or cocktails . . . where the guests circulate and perch around, then a round-about seat for the middle of the room will have nostalgic charm. This has a round center back, is upholstered and fringed around the bottom and will seat ever so many. Not so big and without the center back rest is a large round hassock, or pouf, that you can get in any covering—we like it in a beige textural fabric best.

For incidental sitting there is a low-backed low-armed upholstered chair that's really more of a hassock with back and arm rests. This is made to pull around for conversation. Square leather covered stools, with mahogany bases, similar to those found in front of the sofa in old houses in Natchez, are reproduced today with tops that lift up to reveal sewing compartments inside.

Benches Aid

Small benches are fine to go in front of console tables, library tables, breakfronts, windows—they provide useful seats when needed, look graceful, yet take up little floor space. Side chairs with upholstered backs and seats are offered in unit construction so that they can be used singly or placed together to make a bench.

Sun-Tanning Lotion

Hollywood, Calif. — Although Pere Westmore, authority on beauty at Warner Bros., favors marketed sun-tanning lotions over those concoted in the kitchen, he nevertheless offers this recipe to all would-betanners who prefer to mix their own: 1 pint of olive oil, 1 cup of vinegar, 10 drops of iodine and dash of cologne.

When Wife Asks Divorce, Man Signs Children, House And Car Over to Her, Then Leaves Town and Suffers Nervous Collapse; Back Again, He Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 32 years old, married since 1932, and have two children (boys) both in reasonably good health. I am retired (for the present, at least) from the United States Government service, because of a "nervous breakdown," brought on, I am sure, by my wife's decision to divorce me. She charges "desertion," but the true cause is incompatability.

When she first instigated this action, I was so distraught that I signed a paper relinquishing full custody of the children to her, and also giving her our house and car. In other words, when my world came tumbling down around my head I determined to clear out and start over. But as is so often the case, I discovered that it is impossible to escape from one's self, and so I came back here to live with an aunt.

The most difficult angle of my problem is that I can't seem to consider my wife as anything but my wife. I have often thought if she were dead, I might possibly become interested in another woman—but right now, I can't even pretend the slightest concern in other females. While my wife can hardly be called a beauty, nevertheless the alchemy of love is too well known to require explanation. Also, I still derive the normal paternal satisfaction from seeing and being with the children.

During this enforced "vacation," I am completing my college education. And since resigning my job, my income is reduced to the point where I have absolutely nothing left after paying incidental expenses and the costs of tuition. It surely does cut me to the quick, having my wife hold a Government job,—which is bad enough when the boys are in school, but worse in summer.

My main question is this: Just how should I proceed to effect a reconciliation? Both my wife and I are surrounded by relatives who (understandably) "cheer for their side." My folks, for instance, consider me "well rid of that gold digger." But I assure you it makes me boil, having my private life the subject of such conversation. Truly, it makes me wonder if it would be best to start again on my journeyings. What is your advice?

Sincerely, W. F. H.

Man's Playing 'Possum In Face of Trouble

DEAR W. F. H.: If your marriage grounded on the rocks of incompatibility, it is unlikely that a dependable reconciliation can be effected—at least, not until each of you has permanently corrected those faults of his own, which in close association gave intolerable offense or discomfort to the other. If your wife was more at fault than you, in the harsh selfishness of her demands; and is now happier going her own way without you, after having fleeced you of the marriage's jointly held possessions, I should say that reconciliation not only cannot be arranged, but should not be attempted.

If, however, you were most to blame—perhaps not deliberately, but owing to neurotic, unstable, unsatisfactory social or emotional behavior (evidence of which is suggested in your collapse into a "nervous breakdown" after she left you)—your chances of negotiating a reconciliation might be considered as co-equal with your ability to outgrow such weakness and become the kind of man she could love, trust, admire and (in emergency) lean on.

The fact that you have so carefully refrained from giving a straightforward story of incidents leading up to the separation suggests that you may have a troubled conscience, which would rather not be confronted with a stark recital of your past misdeeds. This, and the somewhat frivolous flavor of some of your "a s i d e s," (herewith deleted), makes me wonder if you were not, in some respects, exasperatingly immature in your conjugal dealings.

Perhaps the very grandiosity of your distrait gesture in signing everything (even the boys) over to your wife, when she determined upon divorce, was more of a childish than a generous gesture. Perhaps it was intended to "get her goat." Perhaps it was a way of trying to make yourself seem to onlookers a pitiable object. In electing "to clear out and start over"—a theatrical move that was quickly repented and recalled—you may have been trying to worry her with the implied accusation that she was guilty of destroying the very foundations of your existence. In any event, one may suspect that your conduct, in that emergency, savored of a child's, "You'll be sorry when I'm dead," retort to some deserved punishment.

It looks as if you had come quite a cropper, in your high-and-mighty take-off, in discovering, to your sick dismay, that while your wife is no beauty, she had so thoroughly endeared herself to you as to leave no room in your heart for rivals. In sometimes wishing her dead (which is what your "thought" amounts to), so that you "might possibly become interested in another woman," you are giving a very poor account of yourself. And in suffering yourself to be "cut to the quick," at the spectacle of her working to support herself and the boys, while you take refuge from reality in (1) a "nervous breakdown," and (2) a return to campus life—what are you doing but playing possum (which is to say, playing dead) in the face of trouble, threatening the welfare of all?

Most emphatically I advise against renewing your "journeyings." As you have learned, a man can neither outrun his conscience nor hide from his shortcomings. The one rises to confront and the other to betray him, every step of his flight—whatever its speed or direction. When the time for "pay off" comes, it is best to stand one's ground, and work on the spot to clean the slate. In view of your present nervous condition, I believe your first comeback move should consist in "getting right" with yourself. And this means acquiring, through psychological reeducation, an honest and healthy understanding of what has been wrong in your thought and behavior, and how to correct the distortion.

When you have grasped the t r u t h—spiritually, scientifically and empirically affirmed—that success or failure in emotional relationships has roots in one's own basic attitudes toward one's self, one's intimates and life in general, you will have laid the foundation for a finely balanced performance in future, which, if faithfully pursued, will either reclaim your wife's favor; or bring you a richer companionship than you have yet known, with another woman who is genuinely compatible with your true and best self. M.H.

Aviation, Defense Influence Styles

Hollywood, Calif. — Southern California, from where most of the country's best sports fashions stem, has been influenced by the film industry's cycle of aviation films to pluck its clothes right out of the air.

Olivia de Havilland, who holds her own pilots license, is wearing a summery frock in blue with small silver planes flying over the fabric. The dress has a draped skirt and broad yoke.

Alexis Smith's new white suede jacket, copied from one her co-star, Errol Flynn, wears in "Dive Bomber," is smart with a green crepe skirt and diminutive trench cap of apple green suede.

Thrifty Meal

EVERY cook is exploring the possibilities for thirfty meals these days, when the price of foodstuffs is on the rise. When it comes to considering the meat, you can't go wrong by making a meat loaf—a really delicious and attractive meat loaf. I have seen some meat loaves that resembled hash. But that is not the kind I am suggesting.

Dramatize the meat loaf. Cook it in a ring mold, then unmold the loaf and fill the center with new potatoes, creamed, and perhaps laced through with a few tiny white onions. Meat loaves can be served on a plank with a border of mashed potatoes and mounds of peas and carrots to supply the color. Individual meat loaves, too, help to dramatize the food.

Here's a suggestion for a meal taht will not be too hard on the pocketbook, using meat loaf as the pivotal dish.

Dinner Menu

Meat Loaf Boiled Rice
Asparagus Polonaise
Watercress and Tomato Salad
Buttermilk Biscuits
Apple Pandowdy Ice Tea

Most of the dishes suggested are familar ones that we have cooked over and over. Perhaps the asparagus polonaise may be a new dish to some. It is as delicious as it is easy to make. Follow this recipe:

Asparagus Polonaise

Cook asparagus in salted water until tender. Drain. Saute 1 cup dry bread crumbs in 6 tablespoons butter until browned. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, salt and pepper and sprinkle over the hot asparagus tips.

No Dish for Feasts

Spinach is not to be served at weddings, since all greens are food for pixies who will cause trouble at the festical if they are enticed near by this favorite tid-bit.

Fighting It Out With Old Sol

The first requisite for a successful sojourn at the beach is a waterproof kit similar to the gay starfish design shown above. In its pockets is a sun proof cream to help your skin achieve a beautiful golden glow, powder, talcum, makeup base lipstick, rouge and eye shadow.

In addition you will need the following preparations.

A rich lubricating cream to spread over your face, neck and arms while you sleep.

A kit for manicures and pedicures. There's a smart looking kit complete with liquid callous remover, pumice stone, mentholated foot cream, adhesive tape, cotton, tampons, polish remover and new shades of polish. Add a fingernail file and a pair of scissors and this pedkit will be all you need for manicures.

Summer cologne and perfume for evenings. Never sprinkle perfume or toilet water and lie in the sun.

A good stiff hair brush to help you keep your hair in place. Also, a dry shampoo for in between salon visits. If your hair is inclined to dryness be sure to rub in a generous supply of oily preparations made especially for that purpose.

A pair of sun glasses to protect your eyes from sun and glare. Soothing eye pads filled with lotions to relieve strain on eyes.

Business Girl Becomes Sylph In Six Weeks' Test Program

By Ida Jean Kain

SINCE it is generally conceded that sitting for eight hours a day will add to the hip inches at the rate of 1 per annum, accelerate the tendency to thicken through the midrift, and bring out a dowager's hump, the business girl seems inclined to view the loss of her figure as inevitable.

I don't agree. But I must say I have the keenest admiration for the efficiency with which she gives pounds and inches the brush-off once she determines to slim down. There's no dawdling. She demands results and gets them. Quickly.

As a test of what the business girl can do toward regaining her figure I went down to a large corporation in New York City and found a girl with an average office figure—not excessively overweight, but with measurements considerably out of proportion—who volunteered to be "the guinea pig," as she put it, for a six weeks' slimming program.

New Looks Younger

Our volunteer is so delighted with her new appearance that she has consented to let me use her name. She is Betty Blitch. She is younger looking and prettier as well as slimmer.

Betty cooperated 100 per cent. She followed the menus in spirit and the exercises to the letter. As a result, although she only reduced 14 pounds, she controlled the reduction to such a degree that she was able to clip five inches off the waistline, four off the abdomen, four off the hips, and to limit the reduction of the bust measurement to one inch.

Look at the difference these changes made in her proportions:

Waist	31"	30"
Abdomen	40"	35"
Hips	41"	37"
Weight	142 lbs	128 lbs
Height, 5 feet 4 inches

Betty didn't diet in the strict sense of the word—she kept an eye on her food habits and conformed as closely as possible to the balanced low-calorie menus. Her greatest difficulty was in keeping her luncheon calories down to the allowance. She solved this problem by ordering either a fruit or a vegetable salad with just enough dressing to taste, and a glass of milk; or a sandwich made with mustard, no butter, and a piece of fruit. At the end of the day she computed her total calories to make sure she had not exceeded the allowance. Her diet was reinforced with one vitamin A, B, C, D capsule daily—and she insists that "I never felt better than while reducing."

A trio of exercises, varied from week to week, controlled the loss in inches. She particularly favored backward arm circling, the side-scissors for the hips, and a waistline slimmer in which you lie on the back on the floor, knees flexed feet on floor close to hips, and, twisting at waist, knees together, rest alternate thighs on floor at either side.

If you'll take a tip from Betty—"Don't mention your intentions of reducing to your friends beforehand, or they will discouraged you. Let them discover the changes you are making for themselves—and they'll tell you how well you are looking!"

In a short time I hope to be able to tell you about an overweight career woman who started to slim down—and who is doing very nicely. Whether she can improve on the success of Betty Blitch remains to be seen.

Rule of Having Home Reflect Owner's Personality Is Followed by Post Decorating Authority

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

WHAT does an interior decorator do when she is turned loose in her own home? Miss Elizabeth MacRae Boykin, writer on home decoration for The Washington Post, answered this question when she was in town recently.

Miss Boykin in private life is Mrs. Charles A. Wells. The Wellses live in Scarsdale, N. Y., in a 12-room house of chalet type, built on several levels of brown timber and stone. No general decorative theme has been used in the furnishing of the house, since Miss Boykin brought items from all over the world.

This authority believes in an organized household. While she does not have the time to carry on personally all the household duties, she loves housekeeping, knows how to do it and makes a ceremony of it when she has the opportunity to do so.

As Miss Boykin and her artist husband work at home, they share a large workroom. The walls are finished in elephant-hide color and the ceiling is painted a bright green. The rug is of the same color as the wall. Across the big wall, bookshelves have been built in and painted the same color as the woodwork. The linen drapes at the windows are of a horsey design. A great leopard skin decorates one wall, and travel maps and sketches done by Mr. Wells decorate another. A view opens onto a yard with trees.

Son Has Blue Room

The son of the household, 5½ years old, has a room next to the workroom. The walls are light blue, with sketches done in free-hand in tempera by his father. These sketches are of children of all nations. A built-in desk and functional shelves, so that the child can easily reach his books and playthings, are a feature of the room. In true boy fashion, the son keeps a live turtle in his room.

Elizabeth Mac Rae Boykin

A pale blue bedroom, following the eighteenth-century theme, has been Miss Boykin's choice for her boudoir. The walls are decorated with pale blue and white striped paper, the floor covered with a blue broadloom rug. At the windows hang lace net curtains with light blue taffeta valance with side jabots. An antique mahogany poster bed and a highboy are items of furnishing in this bedroom. Color accents of wine red have been used. The bed is draped with red, and the spread is of a blue ground with red flowers. The chaise lounge has an Empire mahogany frame with pale blue upholstery and the cushions for it are in blue and wine red.

Kitchen Has Blue Walls

The kitchen, which Miss Boykin says is a most important part of the household, has pale blue walsl, white marbleized linoleum as floor covering, and white organdy curtains with valance of Tyrolean print. The many built-in shelves of the kitchen hold Korean trays, gay-colored pottery and many interesting kitchen utensils the decorator has picked up in her travels.

As a concession to her French drawing room, Miss Boykin has decorated her dining room in a more modern manner, with a great deal of oyster white, cream-colored notes and tiny bits of pink. Turquoise Chinese damask has been used for the chair coverings.

Exhibiting a broken fingernail, Miss Boykin said that her fingernails are forever ruined because of her enthusiasm for gardening. She likes to transplant the flowers growing in her garden. Since the Wellses have about an acre of sloping terrace, there is plenty of thought to be given to outside decorative activities.

Society Goes to Anne Bullitt's Debut Dance by Air, Rail and Auto

Brilliant Affair at Family Estate, Near Philadelphia, Attracts Guests From Capital and Other Points

Philadelphia, June 27.—By plane, train and car Washingtonians arrived here yesterday for the gala debut dance which former Ambassador William C. Bullitt gave tonight in honor of his daughter, Anne. Meadow Farm, the Bullitt home in Penllyn near Philadelphia, was the scene of the party. Guests reported that the host had cleared the fences from eight acres of his place to make a special landing field for private planes. The company included, besides leading Philadelphians, socially-prominent guests from New York, Cleveland and Newport.

Miss Anne Bullitt

Two huge marquees, covering a good portion of the rolling lawn, had been set up for outdoor dancing. Meyer Davis and his musicians, along with a full size Hungarian orchestra, furnished the music. The house and terraces were decorated with quantities of delphinium in varied shades of blue, and masses of madonna lilies. This color scheme carried out Anne Bullitt's expressed wish for a blue and white coming out party.

The slender deb received with her father, wearing a bouffant gown of white tulle. The fitted bodice was embroidered with glittering white paillettes and the skirt was fashioned on very full lines. Miss Bullitt carried an old fashioned nosegay.

Among the guests from Washington were Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the Minister to Sweden; Mr. and Mrs. John Wiley, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch and blonde Nedenia Hutton, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Davies. Miss Hutton has been having a whirl on Long Island and will go to South Carolina next week to be bridesmaid at a wedding.

"Evie" Robert chose for the dance a black tulle gown, with which she wore her tiara of pearls and diamonds. Mrs. Hornbeck's frock of gold satin was made with a little jacket. Dr. and Mrs. Hornbeck attended one of the many dinners given before the dance by Philadelphia couples. Mr. and Mrs. Robert, on arriving, went straight to the home of Mrs. George Earle, wife of our Minister to Bulgaria. They later accompanied her to several cocktail parties and a dinner before the dance.

Roberts to Attend Dedication at Hyde Park

Both couples returned to Washington early this morning by train. The Roberts will leave tonight for New York and on Monday will go to Hyde Park to attend the dedication of the President's library. Later in the week they will be off for a vacation at Sea Island, Ga.

Mrs. Sterling, whose ball here June 12 in honor of Miss Bullitt is still being discussed as one of the most brilliant affairs of the season, has been in Philadelphia for several days. Last evening she was honor guest at a dinner given by William Taylor, of West Chester. Mr. Taylor has spent several winters in the Capital and owns that attractive red brick house in Georgetown which is now leased to Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley.

The debutante's cousin, Miss Louisa Bullitt, was on hand with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bullitt, of Philadelphia. Miss Bullitt had chosen a blue lace frock with narrow shoulder straps and no trimmings. A handsome pin at the decolletage was her only ornament.

Braggiottis Are Among Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Emlen Etting—she was Gloria Braggiotti—were renewing acquaintance among their many Washington friends. Her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mario Braggiotti, and Glamour Girl Kay Halle, of Cleveland, a frequent Washington visitor, are spending the weekend with her and were also at the dance. Mrs. Etting chose an unusual-gown of white crinkled crepe, made on Grecian lines, with pale yellow veiling suspended from the shoulders and enveloping the entire gown. Miss Halle's frock of black tulle was made with a heart-shaped neckline and trimmed with a drapery of white tulle fastened with opal ornaments. Mrs. Braggiotti wore flame-colored lace with a black lace mantilla which fell from a white rose in her hair.

Other gowns of fragile summer fabrics in brilliant and pastel shades contributed to the beauty of the scene. Mrs. Nicholas G. Roosevelt wore a coral-colored, pleated chiffon frock with a necklace and earrings of crystal. Mrs. Nicholas Biddle of Philadelphia chose a gown fashioned with a full embroidered skirt of white pique and a bodice of black silk jersey. A cluster of red and white flowers adorned one shoulder.

Miss Bullitt, who accompanied her distinguished father to all his European posts, from Moscow to Paris, was graduated from the Foxcroft School early in June. Many of her classmates were on hand for her dance last evening. All agreed that it was one of the most brilliant functions society had seen for some time—and doubtless won't see again for some time to come.

Marilynn Himes Honors Visitor At Swim Party

A favorite summertime entertainment—a swimming party—was given yesterday by Miss Marilynn Himes. She has the ideal place for it at her parents' home near Frederick, Md., where there's a large pool at one end of the garden.

Guest of honor at the party was pretty, blonde Miss Saffold Winkler, of New Orleans. Both she and the hostess were bridesmaids at the wedding there last month of Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree and Oliver Hammonds, and Miss Winkler recently arrived to visit Miss Himes at Prospect Hall. She will be here until next Friday.

The guests were asked to wear sports clothes and the hostess had chosen a white dress trimmed with bands of green and red. Miss Winkler wore blue. After swimming a buffet supper was served in the downstairs playroom. There small tables, covered with red and white checked cloths, were set up for the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammonds were present and other guests included Miss Betty van der Straten-Ponthoz, daughter of the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz; Miss Nancy Weller, Miss Deborah Kirk, Miss Emily Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Boss, Travis Brown, Cully Darlington—his fiance, Miss Ruth Pearson, is out of town; Britten Browne, Fred Penniman, William FitzGerald, who will entertain 12 at dinner tonight at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Miss Winkler; Bradner Smith, John Brown, Hal Clagett and Ludlow Mackall.

Miss Himes returned to Frederick yesterday afternoon after a stay of several days at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss McCandlish Will Be Honored At Luncheon Today

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. McCandlish, jr., will entertain at a luncheon today for his sister, Miss Sally McCandlish, of Baltimore, and Richard Huse Crane, who will be married today in the Truro Episcopal Church in Fairfax, Va. Guests will include members of the wedding party.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Eula Council entertained at a party in honor of the couple. Miss McCandlish is guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Dawson Richardson, at their home, White House, in Fairfax.

Mrs. Simonds Goes Away for Summer

Mrs. Frank Simonds, who has lingered on in Washington this month because "I'm afraid I'll miss something," left the exciting atmosphere of the Capital yesterday for the summer. Her son, James Simonds, accompanied her to New York. From there Mrs. Simmonds will go on to Saratoga for a stay.

Afterward Mrs. Simonds will go to Snowville, N. H., where she has a summer home, and will not return here until the fall.

W. W. Nusbaums On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Nusbaum are en route to Canada following their wedding here recently at the Foundry Methodist Church. The bride is the former Miss Helen Louise Bailey, of Berwind, W. Va., and this city. The Rev. James Wysor, of Berwind, officiated at the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bailey.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white mousseline de soie gown made along old-fashioned lines and ending in a train. Her veil fell from a cap of satin and she carried a bouquet of white roses centered with an orchid. Mrs. John Bailey, sister-in-law, served as matron of honor. She wore a hyacinth blue net frock made with a fitted bodice and carried talisman roses. The remaining attendants were Mrs. Walter Bonnet, Mrs. L. Vincent Stevenson and Mrs. Robert Bailey. They wore yellow, green and rose gowns, respectively. They wore matching bonnets, lace mits and carried nosegays of spring flowers.

John Dye was best man and ushers were Harold Nausbaum, brother of the bridegroom; L. Vincent Stevenson, John Bailey, Robert Bailey, Walter Bonnet and John Ortilani.

Bards Entertain At Cocktail Party For Navy Group

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Ralph Bard entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue. The guests were mostly Navy officials and their wives. Secretary Knox was invited but had to leave on the 5 o'clock plane yesterday for his home in Manchester, N. H.

The party was in the nature of a farewell for Mrs. Bard, who leaves on Monday for her home in Chicago. She will return to Washington in September. Yesterday the hostess wore a frock of blue georgette with lingerie collar and cuffs of organdy. The tea table was centered with pink roses.

McMichael, Hooker Nuptial Rites Are Held

In a candlelight ceremony last evening, Miss Ruth Hooker became the bride of Stuart McMichael at 8 o'clock, in the Church of the Brethren in Nakesville, Va. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross Hooker, of Belle Glade, Fla. Mr. McMichael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ewing McMichael, of Nakesville, Va. The Rev. Guy West officiated at the ceremony and calla lilies, intermingled with white gladioli, were used to adorn the altar.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown ending in a long train. It was fashioned with leg-o'-mutton sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Her veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of calla lilies and lilies of the valley.

Miss Nancy Lee Hooker served as maid of honor for her sister. She wore a blue marquisette gown fashioned with inserts of lace. Her bouquet was of red roses. The remaining attendants were Mrs. W. J. Field, another sister of the bride, of West Palm Beach, Fla., Mrs. Howard Payne, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Arline McMichael, all of Nakesville, Va.; Mrs. Phillip Reading and Miss Eleanor Gray Thomas, of Palmer, Va. They wore pastel tinted gowns of lace and marquisette. Their bouquets were of red roses.

Phillip Reading, of this city, was best man and ushers were John Hooker, Howard Payne, Stanley Harpine, Earl Somers and Ernest Spitler, jr., all of Nakesville, and William Hedrick, of this city.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's grandfather, J. A. Hooker. Mrs. Hooker wore a light blue crepe frock and Mrs. McMichael was gowned in navy blue lace. When the couple left on their Northern motor tour the bride wore a black and white bengaline suit. They will live in Nakesville, Va. The bride attended Stetson University in Deland, Va., and Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Va. She took graduate work at Madison College in Harrisonburg, Va.

Wijkmans to Leave Capital Tomorrow

The Swedish Consul General in Montreal, Per Wijkman, and Mme. Wijkman will leave tomorrow for Canada. M. Wijkman was recently named to his new post after serving in Finland and at the Swedish Foreign Office.

The couple has been widely entertaining since arriving here several weeks ago on their return from Europe. Mme. Wijkman is a sister of Vice President Henry A. Wallace and Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister. The envoy and Mme. Bruggmann hope to move the end of the month into the property which the Swiss government purchased last winter as a legation. The house is being remodeled.

Church Women to Make Neighborhood Surveys

By Lucia Giddens

Church women will take the lead in "An Adventure in Neighborhood Friendliness," a program designed to sum up "what's right with Washington" and to assess its most urgent community needs, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Eta Mai Russell, executive secretary of the Washington Council of Church Women, described the new program which she has mapped for area chairmen to carry out this summer.

The chairmen will meet for luncheon at 1 p. m. Monday at her home, 476 N Street Southwest, to plan for setting the program in motion.

"Believing that the church should be the center of life in the community, we are calling on the churches to discover both the assets and needs, to plan ways of making existing agencies and services better available to the people who need them, and to plan new services for community betterment," Miss Russell said.

She has outlined a busy summer for the area chairmen, whose first task will be to survey the community, listing its churches and their activities; public agencies, such as schools and libraries, and private agencies such as those in the Community Chest.

Among questions to be answered by each area chairman are: What do the houses tell about your community? Who gets sick in your community and why? Where do people play in your community? What sort of incomes do the people have? What happens to family life in the community? What happens to people of other races and color in your community? What happens to newcomers?

At a meeting of area chairmen, on October 3, they will report on community needs and objectives for meeting those needs, with a statement of definite plans by which church women can make each community a better place in which to live.

Mrs. George A. Ross, president of the council, and Mrs. Harold B. Rogers, Juvenile Court chairman for the council, along with Miss Russell, will lead the discussion at Monday's meeting.

Area chairmen who have been summoned to the meeting include: Mount Pleasant, Mrs. E. C. Myers; Southwest, Mrs. Eugene Fugitt; Central, Mrs. Clyde Reed, jr.; Takoma Park, Ms. T. W. Marshall; Cleveland Park-Wesley Heights, Mrs. E. A. Back; Brookland-Woodridge, Mrs. L. M. Clark; Bloomingdale, Mrs. T. H. Young; Southeast, Mrs. James Coffey; Dupont, Mrs. Oscar L. Pyle and Mrs. Albert Evans; Brightwood, Mrs. Donald Weikert; Petworth, Mrs. Sue Richwine; Georgetown, Mrs. W. E. Ellett; Anacostia-Congress Heights, Mrs. Jean Graves; Chevy Chase, Mrs. Dwight Jones; Bethesda, Mrs. C. Robert Seckinger.

ZTA Chapter Holds Rush Party Today

Beta Alpha Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority will have a tea this afternoon as its first summer "rush party" for girls planning to attend colleges where the sorority has chapters. It will be given at the home of Mrs. Edgar Withrow, 3505 Rittenhouse Street Northwest.

Hostesses from the alumnae chapter assisting Mrs. Withrow are Mrs. Laurie Hess, Mrs. W. Paul Briggs, Mrs. Rene Reixach, and Mrs. Linton Smith. Girls from Beta Alpha Chapter assisting are Mary Burklin, Edith Davis, and Evelyn Weber.

Several girls home for the summer from Duke University, Chestertown, Randolph-Macon, Illinois, Ohio and Brenau will be guests. These include Janet Moran, Irene Isherwood, Constance Glass, Mary Anne Coughlin, Mary Jane Love, Marjorie Gould, Anne Fenderson, Rossman Taylor, Leonore Wrench, and Virginia Clarke.

Federation Plans Program

Underwood & Underwood

Officers of the department of education in the District Federation of Women's Clubs met yesterday to plan an expanded program for next fall. In the group, left to right, were Mrs. O. G. Hankins, chairman of the department; Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, president of the Federation; Mrs. Charles H. Lane, department vice chairman.

Mrs. Lowe Gets City Club Post

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, former president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, was appointed chairman of the civics committee of the Women's City Club yesterday.

At the same time Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, president of the club, announced that the committee will meet at 10 a. m. Wednesday to plan its program.

Mrs. Lowe, who was recently elected secretary of the D. C. Legislative Council, said yesterday that she expected the civics committee will closely follow legislative measures affecting the District. As committee chairman, she succeeds Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

The Women's City Club will hold a quiz contest between teams of homemakers and business and professional women at 8 p. m., July 10, Mrs. Middlemiss announced.

Mrs. H. L. Richardson will head the homemakers' group, while Miss Marjorie Webster will be chairman of the other team. Miss Lottie L. Anderson will be the questioner. A buffet supper will be served in the garden.

Mortar Board Talks Defense

Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist has returned to her home in Washington after attending this week the national convention of Mortar board, at Buck Hill Falls, Pa., where she led a round table discussion on the national defense program as it affects the college girl.

The discussion brought out the fact that college girls would feel the "economic tightening up" and that many of them would have to plan their spending more carefully, Mrs. Gilchrist said yesterday.

The girls agreed that they should try to keep college conditions as normal as possible in the emergency, but that they should work courses in nutrition and other home defense subjects into their programs.

Mrs. R. H. Paddock attended the convention as delegate from the alumnae association of Washington. Miss Mary Jo Oslin was delegate from the George Washington University Chapter and Miss Doris McFarland from the University of Maryland Chapter. Mrs. Gilchrist was a member of Mortar Board in her student days at Cornell University.

Miss Myra Hall, of Washington, attended as director of Section Two of the organization.

Among the group returning from the convention yesterday were several active members of the George Washington University Chapter: Miss Elsie Carper, Miss Katherine Bowen, Miss Kathryn Hershey and Miss Marjorie Wilkins.

Mortar Board, which is a women's senior honor society with 75 chapters in colleges and universities, held the convention from Sunday through Thursday.

Writers' Club Fete Raises Library Fund

A patriotic dinner was given last night for members and friends of the Professional Writers' Club at the Fairfax Hotel to raise funds to increase the club's library.

Miss Wanda Johnson, in charge of the program, introduced informally several guests, including Mrs. Irving H. Ketchum and Miss Myrta Ethel Cawood, co-founders of the club. Miss Mary Jane Brunley managed the quiz in which Miss Zella Botelar, Miss Ruby Nevins, Miss Frances Meilleur, and Miss Edith Alderman were asked questions on American history and national defense. A community sing, for which Mrs. Leila Marshal was accompanist, followed.

Miss Marie Judkins arranged the dinner, while Mrs. Elizabeth P. McSwain and Mrs. Helen Potts were hostesses for the evening.

Mrs. Willis Writes Skit

Mrs. Eva Hurd Willis, of Brookland Baptist Church, has written a radio skit explaining the "doll adoption" program of the Washington Council of Church Women, for presentation over Station WJSV at 9:40 a. m. next Saturday. Mrs. George A. Ross, president of the council; Mrs. Harold B. Rogers, chairman of the doll program, and six children from the Brookland Baptist Church are rehearsing the skit.

Club Federation Adds Radio To Its Activities

A clearing house of information about club projects and an outlet for clubwomen's musical and dramatic talent will be provided in the radio programs proposed yesterday as an expanded activity of the education department of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, new president of the federation, met with department officers yesterday at luncheon at the Women's City Club to make a start on its plans for the fall.

The division of radio, with Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss as chairman, and the motion picture division, headed by Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, have been raised in rank from committees, for the coming year.

Mrs. Middlemiss yesterday outlined tentative plans for a systematic radio series on clubwomen's activities, including national defense projects.

Mrs. Fred S. Walker, of Park View Club, was appointed yesterday as chairman of the preschool and kindergarten committee under the public instruction division, headed by Mrs. F. S. Mulkern, of the Sunshine and Community Society.

Mrs. O. G. Hankins, of the Woodridge Book Club, chairman of the education department, and Mrs. Charles H. Lane, of the same club, vice chairman, were in the group conferring with Mrs. Watkins.

Since being installed as Federation president last week, Mrs. Watkins already has met with the department of American citizenship and the department of the American home to launch their program-planning before fall.

The latter department, headed by Mrs. James G. Osborne, has fitted several national defense activities into its program. A committee on defense bonds and stamps has been set up under its division of family finance. Committees on consumer education, nutrition, housing and nursing will function under the homemaking division.

The department of legislation, headed by Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, will meet Wednesday to make preliminary plans for its activities in the new administration. Within two weeks, it is expected that every department will have had such a conference, Mrs. Watkins said. Department chairmen will meet in September to coordinate plans in preparation for the opening of the Federation season in October.

Beta Chapter To Initiate Three

Miss Elberta E. Borden, Miss Marie D. Doyle and Miss Mary Virginia Lee will be initiated into Beta Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, women's legal fraternity, at the Sulgrave Club at 7 o'clock tonight.

Mrs. Marie Macquarrie Allen, retiring president of the chapter, will officiate at the ceremonies. Miss Marion L. Goshorn will be installed as her successor.

Mrs. Mary Connor Myers, former special assistant to the Attorney General, and Miss Catherine L. Vaux, national vice president of the fraternity, will be guest speakers at the banquet. Mrs. Nadine Lane Gallagher, chairman of the initiation committee, will preside.

Among those making reservations are Mrs. Mary L. Ambrosi, Miss Selma Anderson, Miss Georgina Bingert, Miss Henrietta Campbell, Mrs. Blanche O. Carroll, Miss Catherine Connaker, Mrs. Rose Mary Filipowicz, Miss Margaret Heimiller, Mrs. Julia Benton Hopkins, Miss Sylvia Hukriede, Miss Bernardine Huntt, Miss Mary L. Martin, Mrs. Marie Murray, Miss Nora O. Rentz, Mrs. Dorothy Dorian Samuel, Miss Alice Schlinger, Mrs. Katherine Serpas, Mrs. Catherine Shelton, Mrs. Mytle Sherrill, Mrs. Mary Wright Shirley, Miss Mildred Thissell, Mrs. Pearl Phillips, Mrs. Veatrice Truitt, and Miss Bernice Woodward.

Pen Women to Give Founders' Day Tea

The annual founders' day tea of the District branch of the National League of American Pen Women will be given tomorrow afternoon in the garden of Dr. Frances Moon Butts, 10 East Underwood Street, Chevy Chase.

Among the guests of honor will be Mrs. Emma M. V. Triepel, only living founder of the league; Mrs. Erna Knight Gasch, national president and member of the District of Columbia branch; Mrs. Audrey Wurdemann Auslander, a past national president, and other members of the national board. Other guests will be officers and members of the Chevy Chase and Baltimore branches.

The program will feature several addresses and the presentation to Mrs. Theodore Tiller of her L. A. P. W. pin, to which a new bar has been added with the inscription, "Founder President District Branch 1921." The tea celebrates the forty-fourth anniversary of the national organization.

Sanatorium Group Hears Milk Report

Members of the City of Hope Auxiliary of the Los Angeles Sanatorium, at a tea yesterday, heard a report on its local milk project from Mrs. Herman S. Hoffman, who is promoting it.

She explained that funds contributed by members are turned over to Health Security Administration of Washington for use of families who need milk but are unable to obtain it otherwise.

Harold N. Imber, executive secretary of the New York branch of the sanatorium, spoke yesterday on its work at the membership tea at the home of Mrs. Benjamin Brill, auxiliary president, 1503 Hamilton Street Northwest.

Ruby Black Named 1941 'Headliner'

Miss Ruby Black, well-known newspaper correspondent and writer, was named yesterday as one of three outstanding women journalists who will receive the 1941 National Headliner awards from Theta Sigma Phi, professional journalistic sorority.

"I have absolutely no idea," said Miss Black yesterday, in answer to a question as to what work she is receiving the award for. "It might be for my book, 'Eleanor Roosevelt: A Biography,' which was published last fall," she said, "or it might be because of my work as a United Press staff member, covering Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences."

Miss Black, a correspondent for newspapers in Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Maine, Texas, Iowa, western New York and Puerto Rico, has been in Washington since 1926. She discounted the possibility that the award is for her correspondence.

"In September," she said, "I turned over the corresponding job to my assistant, Miss Virginia Imlay, so that I might work on the biography of the First Lady."

For two years Miss Black was president of Theta Sigma Phi, and for eight years she edited the sorority's magazine, Matrix. In 1939-40, Miss Black was president of the Women's National Press Club here. In recent months she has concentrated on magazine writing.

Other winners of Theta Sigma Phi's annual awards are Mrs. Martha Wright Shakespeare, of Kalamazoo, Mich., and Frances Cavanah, of Chicago. The names were announced yesterday at a luncheon opening the sorority's two-day annual convention at Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.

Lack of Jobs In Defense Bars Paroles

Many prisoners eligible for parole who have skills that can be utilized in defense industries have not been released because they have no jobs, it was said yesterday at the concluding session of the Institute of Catholic prison chaplains in the National Catholic School of Social Service, 2400 Nineteenth Street Northwest.

A number of recommendations were announced as a result of last week's conferences of more than 40 Catholic prison chaplains from Federal and State penal institutions all over the country. They met under auspices of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice, and the National Conference of Catholic Charities, in cooperation with the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Among recommendations were that chaplains help prisoners find jobs when they are eligible for parole; that they keep a record of unusual cases during the coming years which, when completed, will be made into a volume for study.

It was also felt that chaplains should make every effort to know the family background and the family itself of prisoners and to keep in close contact with all social agencies that might aid the prisoner upon his release.

It was said that all Catholic lay organizations will be asked to help prisoners obtain jobs upon their release.

More dignified places of worship within penal institutions were recommended also, as were annual missions in the prisons.

The chaplains were asked to avail themselves of all modern methods of religious instruction and it was urged that programs of character education in some prisons be extended. The committee report was given by the Rev. Don Kanaly, chaplain, Federal reformatory, El Reno, Okla.

Dr. Aloysius S. Church, psychiatrist, Lincoln Hall, Lincolndale, N. Y., spoke at the meeting yesterday as did Robert E. Bond, of the American Red Cross. Msgr. John O'Grady, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, presided at all sessions.

Mary Sibley, Penksa Sentenced For Slayings

Justice Jesse C. Adkins yesterday sentenced Gazie A. Penksa to a jail sentence of from 15 years to life following his conviction of second degree murder in the shotgun slaying of Joseph L. Caliguiro last March 15.

In the same hour in District Court he sentenced Mary Sibley to a term of from 10 to 30 years for the slaying of her husband, Oscar S. Rush, jr., last September 16. She also had been found guilty of second degree murder by a District Court jury.

First degree murder, with the death penalty, had been requested by the Government in both cases. Both defendants took their sentences without trace of emotion.

Fighting Boys Cause Riot Call

Several hundred persons were thrown into a near panic last night when a fight broke out among a group of boys at a carnival at Eleventh and K Streets Northeast.

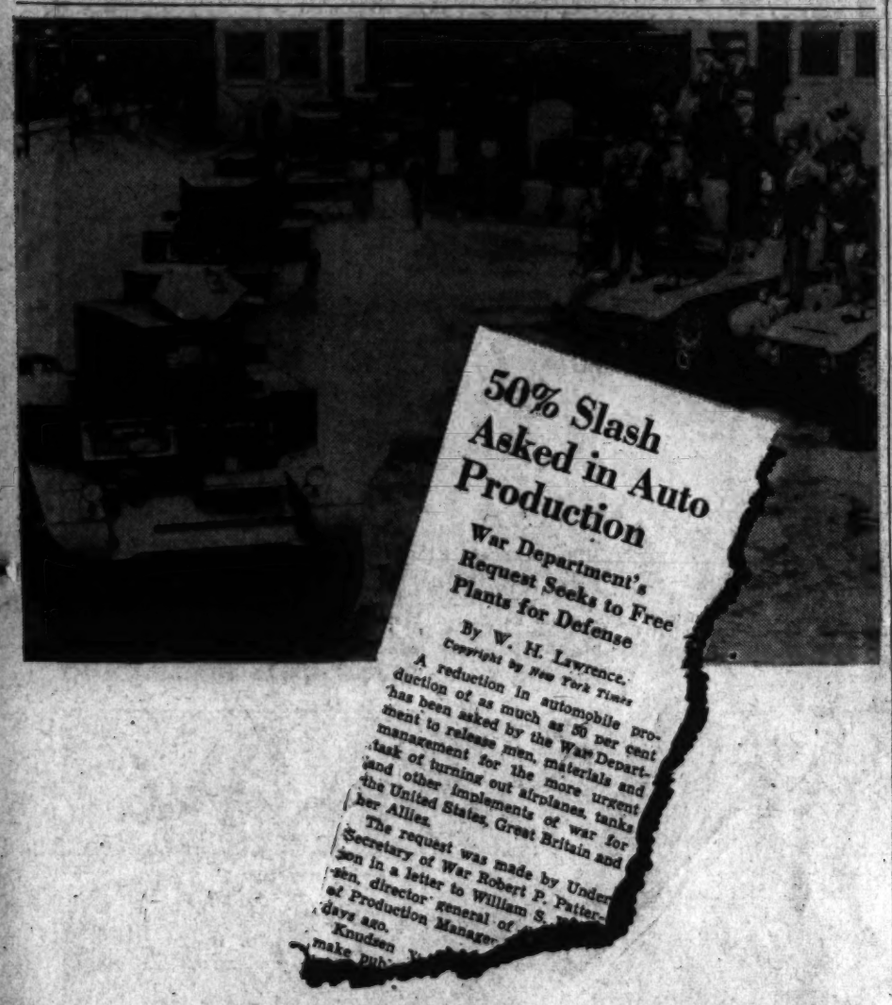
Police headquarters was called and a riot call broadcast. Four scout cars, two traffic cruisers, three motorcycles and police reserves from Ninth Precinct were sent to the scene.

However, when police arrived, the fight was over. Two of the boys who started the trouble were sent home by a patrolman.

Pigeon Sets Record; 600 Miles in 14 Hours

The Army Signal Corps reported yesterday that "General Mauborgne," one of its messenger pigeons, had established a speed record by flying 600 miles in less than 14 hours.

The flight, in Kansas and Texas, was without aid of a tail wind, it was said.



50% Slash Asked in Auto Production
War Department's Request Seeks to Free Plants for Defense

A reduction in automobile production of as much as 50 per cent has been asked by the War Department to release men, materials and management for the more urgent task of turning out airplanes, tanks and other implements of war for the United States, Great Britain and her Allies.
The request was made by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson in a letter to William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management a few days ago.

DEFENSE NEEDS WILL CAUSE A GREATER DEMAND FOR LATE MODEL USED CARS

Pick yours now from the Post's Best Buys!

Fewer new cars mean two things: More demand for late model used cars. Fewer late model cars being traded in for new ones. Add these two together and you can see why it's smart to pick your later model used car right now — while there's more selection.

Speaking of selection, the easiest way to select the cars you want to look over is to go through The Post's "Best Buys" on the classified pages. Cars are grouped by price classes, and then listed alphabetically. Makes your selection process quick and easy. Turn to the "Best Buys" now and see for yourself.

Tires, Culverts Added Hazards In Fort Belvoir's 'Steeplechase'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Nothing in this modern Army Uncle Sam is building up today is very much like what its predecessor went through in 1918. Even calisthenics, that monotonous substitute for something to do, has been streamlined.

Out at Fort Belvoir, Va., the Engineer Replacement Center has a 400-yard obstacle race course designed for fighting men. It makes exercise a joy and makes a game of military training.

The course, laid out over rugged terrain through which a small stream winds, borrows its obstacles without discrimination from the battlefield and from the football field. There are trenches to hurdle and a field of automobile tires to wade through. There are ladders to climb, a wall to scale and rope swings to speed a soldier across the little stream.

Men are introduced to the obstacle course gradually. At first, they just run around it and clear its obstacles as best they can. From then on, difficulties and fun multiply. The final race is run with the men carrying combat packs and rifles, teaching them to handle themselves and their fighting tools under any awkward circumstance that might arise on a battlefield.

The course starts easily with a 2-foot hurdle (1), followed closely by a narrow ditch which must be leaped. An 8-foot wall (2) is next, over which the men clamber with the aid of cleats and short rope-ends, and then race on to a 4-foot breastwork faced with logs.

After that, they swing themselves by ropes (3) over the stream, make an abrupt turn at full speed and cross the stream again, this time on ladders laid from bank to bank. The next obstacle is the field of automobile tires (4), through which they step as football players are taught to do in training, and then a 5-foot fence.

The stream is crossed again, on narrow stringers (5), and the soldiers dash on to a row of pipe iron (6) through which they crawl with all their equipment, then rise and run ahead to a trench which they hurdle.

This trench is followed by a field of stakes, through which they worm their way at full speed before passing on to a 2½-foot hurdle. A wide antitank ditch comes next, and then a barricade of 12-foot ladders (7), over which they must climb up and down. The last obstacle is a 6-foot sandbagged breastwork (8).

Par for the course has not been announced.

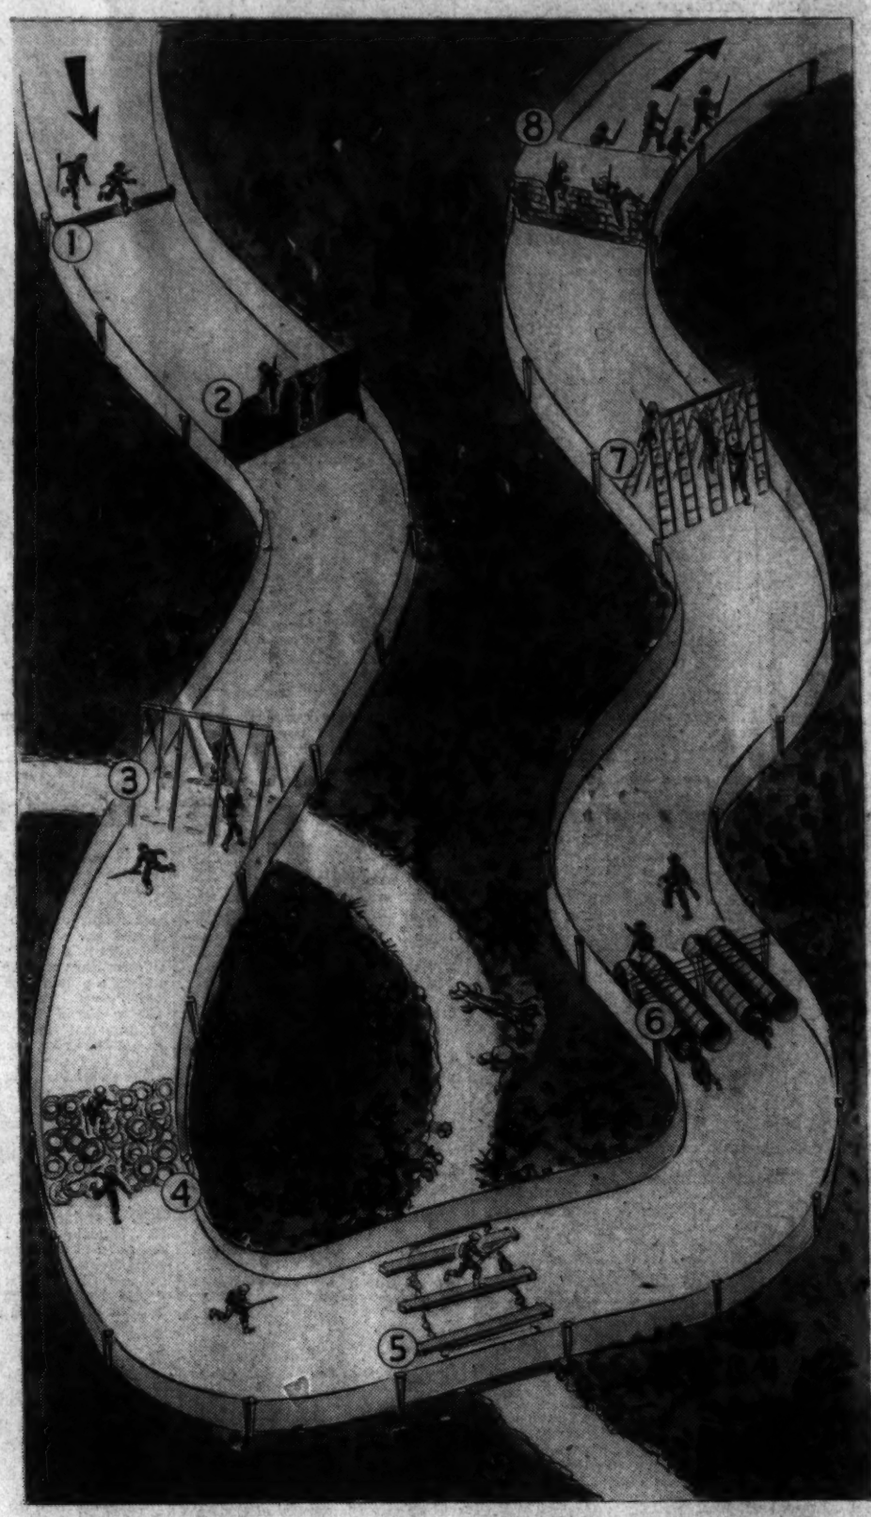
1. A 2-FOOT HURDLE is the first obstacle in Fort Belvoir's race course for fighting men

8. 6-FOOT SANDBAG BREASTWORK looms before the finish line. It must be taken in stride

Official Fort Belvoir Photos

2. WITH AIDE OF ROPES, troops scale 8-foot, smooth wall, second of the hazards

3. STREAM through the "steeplechase" course is crossed by advancing soldiers as they swish through the air on rope swings



7. BARRICADE of 12-foot ladders which must be climbed up and down by Belvoir's troops is enough to cut the wind of a hardened fighter

6. ON HANDS AND KNEES, the fighting men, carrying combat packs and rifles, crawl through pipe battery

4. LIKE FOOTBALL PLAYERS in training, the soldiers race through a field of auto tires

5. A 12-FOOT WATER CROSSING is the next hazard on the course. Men must cross on narrow beams

Yoo-Hoo-oo, Skinny!

Chairman Palmer wrote the Iowa Executive Council that congestion in the board's file room had caused "inefficient procedure and delayed operations" and "we are literally forced to use only the small, slender girls in this room."

Civil Service Grading Bill Advanced

Subcommittee Approves Measure; Mead Promises To Speed Action

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, last night forecast early Senate action on the Ramspeck bill for uniform promotion of Federal employes after his subcommittee decided to report the measure favorably at the close of hearings yesterday.

Mead said he would inform Senator Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, chairman of the Civil Service Committee, of the action and ask for consideration of the measure by the full committee today or Monday.

The bill, already approved by the House, would provide promotions in grade every 18 months for employes with high efficiency ratings whose salaries are $3,800 or less. Employes in the high wage brackets would advance every 30 months over a period of 10 years.

Author Confident

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee and author of the bill, told reporters he was certain the Appropriations Committee would vote the money necessary to get the promotion system started after the measure is passed.

The Appropriations Committee strongly indicated that it approves of the promotion plan, it was pointed out, when it inserted in the second deficiency bill, which passed the House Wednesday, a provision banning departmental promotions. It explained that the ban would be lifted when the Senate passes the Ramspeck bill.

As an example of the present haphazard system of government promotions, Ramspeck told the subcommittee that 65 per cent of employes in the National Labor Relations Board got promotions in one year while but 5 per cent at the Mediation Board were advanced.

Sees Long-Term Savings

In the long run, Ramspeck said, the uniform system would save money, while at the same time bolstering employe morale.

The cost to the Government in the first year's operation was placed at $5,000,000 by Edgar B. Young, personnel officer of the Budget Bureau. He added that the bill would bring first-year promotions to 157,000 employes. Over a ten-year period, he said, the cost would be $29,000,000.

Ismar Baruch, chief of the personnel division of the Civil Service Commission, told the subcomittee that the commission is "glad to have a bill to permit the use of ratings for pleasant purposes."

The present service rating system, he said, has been used for "rather unpleasant purposes" such as separation from service and reduction in pay.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Charles I. Stengle, representing the American Federation of Government Employes, joined in indorsing the bill.

Miss Eleanor Nelson, of the United Federal Workers of America, observed that "some form of promotions is better than none," but said the organization prefers the automatic promotion bill of Senator Downey (Democrat), of California.

District Youth With Homemade Helmet Shows How Navy's Divers Do Their Feats

His head encased in metal that formerly did duty as part of the family washing machine, Roger Culler, jr., 18, of 7102 Ninth Street Northwest, yesterday emulated in Takoma Park Recreation Center swimming pool the feats of divers he used to read about in the annals of the Navy.

Culler was inclined to turn aside any praise for his feat.

"Oh, the helmet's just made out of junk," he said. "The metal came from an old washing machine. The glass plate in the front of it used to be the reflector on a desk lamp. I made the weights (two 25-pound pieces of lead that serve as ballast during dives) at school. And I got the tube connecting the helmet and the pump from a gas station. If that's not junk, what is it?"

Culler, who now has a job as a cable splicer with the telephone company, made light also of the technical worth of his homemade diving apparatus.

About 40 pounds constant air pressure was enough for a dive of average length, the youth said. He plans, however, to attach more pumps in order to stay down 30 minutes to an hour.

Culler and a next-door neighbor, Vincent Campeanella, 7104 Ninth Street, were engaged in making the helmet most of the winter, working intermittently as they found spare time.

After Culler's dive the apparatus was in great demand by other youths at the pool. The operations were supervised by George Lentz, pool director.

Judge Warns Whipping Parents, Jails D. C. Mother 60 Days

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough issued a warning to all parents who whip their children yesterday, when he sentenced Mrs. Evelyn M. Stewart to 60 days in jail for beating "Jimmie," her 7-year-old son by a former marriage.

Red-headed Mrs. Stewart stood dry-eyed and unshaken as she heard her sentence from Justice Goldsborough. Under statute law she was subject to a maximum sentence of two years in jail or a fine of $250, or both.

Her husband, Irving Stewart, and brother, Walter James, rushed to the front of the courtroom after Justice Goldsborough had left the bench. Stewart burst into tears in accusing Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius of attacking his wife's testimony.

James was belligerent. Both were told to leave the courtroom by Mrs. Stewart's attorney, Paul J. Sedgewick.

Before passing sentence Justice Goldsborough declared:

"The court doesn't know whether the jury found the defendant guilty of burning the boy. The court has some doubt about his being burned deliberately. The court has no doubt about his being beaten outrageously. Therefore, there is no reason why the defendant should not suffer some penalty for what she did."

He said that the public should know that "parents who suffer from an inferiority complex and who feel they can vent that particular quality on someone who is their physical inferior are liable to punishment under the law."

Whipping a child is a "short cut," he said. "It takes longer to guide a child than it does to break a child's spirit. But its results are incalculably different."

"Jimmie"—Kenneth Ford, jr.—he termed a "bright, lovable child with a forgiving disposition."

The Government accused Mrs. Stewart of first beating the child and then placing him in a tub of hot water at their home, 2133 First Street Northwest, last April 17.

Bookniga Sold U.S. Books, Too, Officer Says

Norman Weinberg, former secretary-treasurer of Bookniga Corporation, told a jury in the Criminal Court of Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday that he had never considered the corporation a propaganda agency since it exported more American books than it imported foreign volumes.

He will continue on the witness stand this morning under cross-examination by Attorney Benjamin Parker, assistant to the Attorney General.

Under questioning by his counsel, Leo A. Rover, Weinberg said the firm had done business with established universities and educational institutions in this country.

He denied any knowledge of the Russian language and stated he had never traveled in that country.

Indicted on charges of failure to register legally with the State Department as agents of a foreign nation are Morris Liskin, former president of the concern, and Raphael Rush, former vice president. Rush and Weinberg are also on trial on a charge of criminal conspiracy—to which Liskin pleaded guilty.

The Government contends that Bookniga was a Communist distribution agent of the Soviet book trust.

35 Receive Hotel Training School Diplomas

The Lewis Hotel Training School, 2301 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, graduated 35 students at exercises held last night in the school auditorium.

Eleven of the students were not present to receive their diplomas because they had already been sent to hotel jobs throughout the country. Among these was Alfred H. Weiss, a French refugee, who arrived here from that country last February.

Another foreign student was Blanca Hernandez, whose father owns a hotel in Puerto Rico. She was sent here to take the course and will return to her country soon.

Clyde B. Douthat presided and short talks were given by Robert J. Wilson, field secretary, National Restaurant Association; William M. Loman, professor from George Washington University; Catherine Witherell, housekeeper, Sinai Hospital, Baltimore, Md.; Mary Catherine Lewis, vice president, and Clifford Lewis, president.

Music ranging from Sibelius' "Finlandia," to Strauss' 'Artist's Life," has been programmed by Dr. Hans Kindler, who will conduct. The opening concert is dedicated to "defense."

Suspected D. C. Narcotic Ring Broken

Washington Man Is Among Seven Rounded Up by Police, U. S. Agents

Federal narcotics agents, customs officers and police were reported yesterday to have smashed what is suspected to be one of the largest narcotic gangs ever attempting traffic in the Washington area. It was said to have been seeking a foothold here because of the city's increasing population.

Of seven persons arrested, while quantities of dope were seized, one was a Washington resident, Richard Rosebrry, 33, 1433 Columbia Road Northwest. Two others have lived here. Julius Eisenberg was taken in Baltimore and gave his address to police as 2901 Thirteenth Street Northwest. Conrad Cimino was arrested in Baltimore, where he operates a cafe as a blind, agents said. Narcotics agents said he left Washington last winter for Baltimore.

Agents Seize Heroin

Agents said they took 10 ounces of heroin and an automobile from Eisenberg at the time of his arrest. At Eisenberg's rooming quarters here, agents said, they seized 14 ounces of heroin, ¼ ounce of morphine and 1 ounce of opium.

Arrested by cities in the raid, which was under planning for three months, were:

Washington: Richard Roseberry.

Baltimore: Eisenberg, George Presto, Edward D'Argenio and Conrad Cimino.

New York City: Louis Presto and Margaret Lovejoy.

Caught Congregating

The four in Baltimore were alleged to have been caught congregating to complete a wholesale sale of narcotics to various retail dealers. No evidence was found on Roseberry nor at his living quarters, it was stated.

Harry J. Anslinger, narcotics commissioner, said "without the fine cooperation of the Narcotics Service, of the Metropolitan police, of the Baltimore police and of the Customs Bureau the capture of this important narcotics ring could not have been accomplished so successfully as was done."

It was the impression among officials otherwise that the group was striving to gain a foothold in the Washington area with a view to big business among an increased population. Eisenberg was called the head of the group. It was recalled that on July 17, 1939, he was acquitted along with Hyman Cole in Towson, Md., court of kidnapping John Harrison in 1935.

Harrison never was seen again after going to a whisky still operated by Eisenberg and Cole, it was brought out at the trial. Both Eisenberg and Cole were convicted for operating the still and later served a prison term in Michigan. Acquittal in the kidnapping case was on basis of lack of evidence.

Eisenberg's bond in the present case has been fixed at $15,000. Roseberry's bond is $5,000.

Narcotic agents said that the value of the seized drugs could not be estimated immediately. In pure form $80 to $100 an ounce might be obtained by illicit salesmen but such salesmen have a practice of adulterating their wares, it was stated.

All of the arrests were made Thursday night.

GASOLINE SAVERS—Miss Margaret Hutchinson, executive secretary at Strayer College, has an idea that saves gasoline consumption, parking space, temper and is as patriotic as it is simple. Each morning one of the four persons shown collects the other three, and they arrive at work with three less automobiles, thereby the savings. The four gas savers are Miss Hutchinson, Miss Virginia Nelson, journalism teacher; Miss Alice Wakefield, vocational counselor, and E. G. Purvis, vice president of Strayers. All admit the idea is faultless. "You have no idea how much we accomplish on the way down," said Miss Hutchinson, who is the originator of the simple conservation trick

D. C. Area Methodists Gather in Md.

By Robert Tate Allen

Post Church Editor

Westminster, Md., June 27.—More than 300 young adults and families from Methodist churches in Maryland and the District convened here tonight for a weekend of worship, sociability and recreation.

In the main, they'll be occupied with the question of "Being a Christian in Such Days as These," studying the problems of young adult leadership, young adults and the home and fellowship and recreation under the leadership of prominent religious and educational workers of the Baltimore conference.

Walter A. Graham, 33-year-old Baltimore Conference director of adult work, and in private life an employe of the Comptroller General's Office, presided over a brief fellowship program during dinner tonight. He is a member of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Washington.

Later in the evening the young adults, whose ages range from 24 to 40, attended a worship service in Baker Chapel, hearing an address on "Christian Fellowship Today," from the Rev. M. L. Rippy, director of adult work for the Methodist Board of Education. An informal social hour, followed by devotions, climaxed the day.

Scheduled tomorrow morning is a business session at 8:30 o'clock; an address on "Worship and Life" by the Rev. E. K. Emurian, of Ferrum (Va.) College, at 9 a. m., and discussions at 10 a. m.

There will be supervised recreation and district meetings tomorrow afternoon and a banquet at 6:30 p. m., when Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, pastor of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church and chaplain of the District Protestant Police and Firemen's Association, will speak on "The Seventh Dwarf."

Sunday's program will open at 6 a. m. with a sunrise communion service. A business session is slated for 8:30 a. m., further group dismussions from 9 to 11 a. m., and an address at 11:15 a. m. by the Rev. Rippy on "After the War—What?"

The Baltimore Conference, which embraces congregations in Maryland, the District and part of West Virginia, was the first conference in United Methodism to launch a complete program for the young adults. Dr. John C. Millian is executive secretary of the conference board of education.

Forty Men On a Horse Car To Tour D. C.

Forty men tomorrow will ride in an 1894 horse car for 65 miles through Washington's tempestuous 1941 traffic.

It's partly for the nostalgic whim of it, the fun of it and it maybe will startle onlookers into thinking that the world, instead of rushing to ruin, has turned backward to something pretty slow (10 to 15 miles an hour) and soothing.

The junket, sponsored by the District of Columbia Chapter, Electric Railroaders Association, will start at 9:10 a. m. from the Georgetown car house, Thirty-sixth and M Streets Northwest and, at 5:55 p. m., after about nine hours of injecting the 1890 drag into the 1941 whizz, will arrive back at the Georgetown starting place.

The horse car is kept as a relic by the Capital Transit Co., as is the cable car (1900) which will pull the horse vehicle. The route is very much all around the town.

Officers of the association are Paul D. Gable, 1908 Hanover Street, Silver Spring, president; Charles J. Murphy, 323 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, secretary. G. F. Cunningham, 3901 Ingomar Street Northwest, is manager of the trip.

Many of the members will wear the checkered trousers and choke collars of the nineties during the ride. They mean to show this present age that people used to take long street car rides for the fun of it, that the world wasn't always in a hurry about it, either.

Falcon, Dangling A Chain, Refuses To Be Recaptured

A lone lorn reddish-brown falcon "no bigger than a robin" with a chain dangling from his feet zoomed over the radio towers of the Bureau of Standards yesterday afternoon, it was reported to The Post, and landed at 3 p. m. in the quadrangle of the south building near Van Ness Street and Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Despite the scholarly and scientific efforts of no less than six chemists, physicists and instrument makers who attempted to woo the wiley bird back into captivity every attempt failed.

It was generally agreed, however, by these gentlemen that the bird wanted to come to them but could not overcome its native instinct and coyly repulsed all of their advances. When last seen the falcon was flitting blithely around the radio towers late yesterday afternoon, its chain dangling behind him but notwithstanding that still "free as a bird."

N. C. Asks Aid To Find Missing Mother, Child, 4

Washington police last night were asked to help North Carolina authorities find a 36-year-old mother and her daughter, 4, who disappeared "under mysterious circumstances" more than six weeks ago.

Mrs. Lelia Lewis Bryan, according to FBI agents in Raleigh, N. C., left her home in Carolina Beach, N. C., with her child, Mary, in a 1935 black Ford sedan carrying North Carolina license 219056. Mrs. Bryan is five and a half feet tall, weighs 120 pounds, has brown eyes and long brown hair.

Fred C. Handy, director of the Department of Justice Bureau at Raleigh, said foul play was feared.

House Votes Down Living Cost Probe

The House voted, 200 to 100, against a resolution calling for a special Congressional committee to investigate the cost of living.

Representative Casey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, was the author of the resolution, which would have set up a five-man committee to study "prices paid for the necessities of life" and recommend appropriate legislation to Congress.

Give Virginia Airport Tax, Planners Say

Capital Board Indorses Move For Jurisdiction By Old Dominion

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech notwithstanding, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday urged a settlement to the Virginia-District of Columbia boundary dispute which would put the new Gravelly Point Airport entirely in the Old Dominion.

The planning body reindorsed the Randolph bill, designed to effect that end. The measure was introduced last year, died with the Seventy-sixth Congress and was reintroduced in January. It is still awaiting disposition.

A few weeks ago Keech delivered to the Commissioners a formal opinion that Washington National Airport is wholly within the District. This is virtually certain to be challenged when—and if—gasoline and liquor tax revenue begins rolling in.

Concluding their monthly meeting, the planners approved the Smith bill setting up a commission to study District-Virginia bridge and tunnel needs and adopted revisions to the East Capitol Street development plan.

Many Civilian Volunteers Get Defense Places

Approximately 10 per cent of the 19,000 civilian volunteers registered with the Central Volunteer Bureau of the District Defense Council have already been placed in emergency jobs, or will take up defense duties shortly, it was announced yesterday.

Of the 1962 names which have been drawn from the files of the Defense Council, 362 have been sent to ten social agencies in Washington to fill gaps in volunteer personnel. Many of the 362 workers have already started work, and the others will begin next week or shortly afterward.

The other 1,600 names have been supplied to the United Service Organizations. On Monday, June 30, these 1,600 volunteers will meet at an assembly in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution Avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth Streets Northwest, at 7:30 p. m., where they will receive instructions before beginning work as solicitors for the U. S. O. campaign. Charles P. Taft will be the principal speaker.

Mischler Fails To Be Surprised At Party for Him

A "surprise" reception for Wendell W. Mischler, private secretary to Chief Justice Hughes, boomeranged yesterday.

Supreme Court attaches held the reception in connection with Mischler's retirement from court duties next Tuesday, when Hughes relinquishes his judicial post.

A desk set was presented by Ernest Knaebel, court reporter, and then the private secretary surprised his audience by pulling from his pocket a typewritten response, which he read.

"I had an intuition that something like this would happen," he explained, "when I was invited to lunch by Marshal Waggaman."

Mischler, a native of Ripley, Ohio, will continue as private secretary to Hughes, a position he has held since 1930.

Sullivan was treated at Georgetown Hospital for shock. The fire at the Parkway Motor Co., Thirtieth and M Streets Northwest, was quickly extinguished.

Organists Guild Ends Convention With Banquet

The American Guild of Organists closed their second national biennial convention last night with a banquet in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Yesterday morning the guild held its annual business meeting and made a visit to the White House at the invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt.

In the afternoon the convention attended an organ recital by Walter Blodgett, of Cleveland, Ohio, at St. John's Church, a concert by the Washington Madrigal Singers at the Folger Shakespeare Library, a discussion of congregation singing at the Church of the Reformation, and an organ recital by E. Power Riggs, British organist, at the Metropolitan Methodist Church.

Plasterers Still On Strike; D. C. Projects Affected

Several hundred plasterers employed on a dozen projects within the District were still out on strike last night with negotiations between the union, Local 841, A. F. L., and the Contracting Plastering Association, Inc., unresumed since they were broken off last Wednesday.

Warren Dyson, president of the association which represents 19 of the 60 contracting plastering concerns within the metropolitan area said, "it seems to me the union is concentrating on a few contractors on a few big jobs."

The union, according to Philip Hoering, international representative is striking for the establishment of a closed shop and wage increase.

Raspberry to Get Diploma Today

Sergt. Mark H. Raspberry of the Capitol Park Police, will be one of 38 men receiving diplomas at the FBI National Police Academy graduation exercises this morning at 10:30 in the Great Hall of the Department of Justice. He has been a member of the park police for ten years, and lives at 7931 Orchid Street northwest.

Diplomas will be presented by Assistant Attorney General Mathew F. McGuire, and the graduates will be addressed by Senator Albert B. Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky, Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. The exercises will close the seventeenth session of the academy.

43 Patients Coming To St. Elizabeths

New York, June 27 (A.P.).—The liner Acadia of the Alcoa Lines arrived from the West Indies today with 246 passengers, including 133 European refugees from the seized French liner Winnipeg.

The Winnipeg, en route from Marseille to Martinique, was captured by a Netherlands gunboat last May 26 when it was only a few hours out of Martinique. She was taken to Trinidad, British West Indies.

Also aboard the Acadi were 43 Negroes suffering from mental diseases, who are being transferred from hospitals in St. Thomas and St. Croix, Virgin Islands, to St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D. C. They were in the care of Robert M. Lovett, Government secretary for the Virgin Islands; Dr. Nathan Rifkinson, municipal physician of St. Thomas and 11 attendants.

D. C. Motorcycle Policeman Hurt In Collision

Motorcycle Policeman Vincent W. Sauls, 33, of the traffic division, was treated at Emergency Hospital for leg injuries suffered in a collision with an automobile at Main Avenue and H Street Southwest.

Page Lipscomb, 24, 52 New York Avenue Northwest, driver of the car, was charged with failure to give right of way.

Mrs. Annie C. Baden, 62, of Brandywine, Md., is in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital with injuries received when hit by a truck in the 3000 block Alabama Avenue Southeast. She suffered leg, hand and collarbone fractures.

Police said the truck was driven by John A. Ainge, 76, also of Brandywine, Md.

Bosox Bow To Sundra's Fine Hurling

6th-Inning Spree, For 3 Runs, Decides Game; Travis' Hitting Is Big Feature

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Clark Griffith switched on his $130,000 lighting system last night and the Nats made light of the third-place Red Sox. They slapped down the expensive Boston cast by a 5-3 score and celebrated their first victory under the Griffith Stadium lamps in three attempts.

Eighteen thousand baseball night-lifers thronged the stands and saw Steve Sundra do a talented pitching job in holding the Red Sox to eight hits. Sundra outpitched Boston's Jack Wilson and Bill Fleming and his act was loudly received by Club Griffith patrons.

Sundra got a terrific lift, though, from Cecil Travis. The Georgia boy banged out three straight hits and with the echo of each blast a Washington run crossed the plate. Like the Red Sox, the Nats made only eight hits, but seven of their blows figured directly in runs.

The Nats won the ball game in the sixth inning, it developed. That's when they packed four of their hits into a three-run uprising against Wilson. Jake Early was the surprised hero of that sixth inning. He hit the equivalent of a bag of mush and it dropped barely out of the reach of three Red Sox in short right-center for a Texas League double that fetched two important runs across the plate.

Trouble Aplenty

It was no breeze for Sundra, however. He was knee-deep in trouble in the seventh and eighth innings and in the eighth the Sox had the tying runs on base with one out, but the big Bohemian extricated himself gracefully. With men on first and third in the eighth and only one down, Sundra snuck a beauteous slow curve past Manager Joe Cronin's violent bat for an important strikeout.

The Red Sox took the field bearing gifts in the first inning, and the Nats took a 1-0 lead on a cheap run. With two out, Jimmy Foxx dropped Joe Cronin's throw on Buddy Lewis' grounder for no reason at all, and a moment later Ted Williams played Cecil Travis' single to left as if it were a hand grenade. By the time Williams and DiMaggio had tracked down Travis' hit, Lewis scored all the way from first. Travis was nipped at the plate when he, too, tried to score on the left-fielder's bobble.

The lower end of the Red Sox batting order inspired the tying run in the third when Doerr and Peacock singled. The latter was a perfect hit-and-run shot through the shortstop territory vacated by Travis, who dashed to cover second. Wilson got Doerr home from third with an infield out.

Cramer Beat It

Roger Cramer set in motion the run that moved the Nats into a 2-1 lead in the fourth by beating out a single over Wilson's head. Lewis drew a walk and with none out Travis lammed a single to center that scored Cramer. Lewis killed any ideas of a big inning for the Nats when he trifled with Dom DiMaggio's arm and was thrown out trying to take third on Travis' blow.

George Archie rocked Wilson for a long double to left to open the Nats' big sixth inning. Cramer drove a single past Doerr, but Archie, fearful the ball would be caught, held at third. Lewis popped out in this crisis, but Travis was again present last evening—this time with his third straight hit—a liner that Joe Cronin failed to hold after a tall leap, and it went for a single, scoring Archie. A bit later, with two out, Early delivered the puniest but most effective hit of the game. It was his cheap double to short right center that escaped the clutches of DiMaggio, Finney and Doerr, and when it fell for two bases Cramer scored from second and Travis ambled home from first.

Forced to Limit

Sundra, with a 5-1 lead at this point, had to work for his triumph. He walked Cronin to start the seventh and Foxx promptly belted a double to the right field wall. Then Sundra bore down magnificently. Travis threw out Tabor, Cronin scoring, Archie came up with a fancy play on Doerr's ground and Peacock grounded tamely to Bloodworth.

Again in the eighth, Sundra was forced to give. With one out, DiMaggio beat out a single over sec-

Milnar Strong As Cleveland Beats Chicago

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 27.—The Cleveland Indians climbed back into undisputed first place in the American League tonight, defeating the Chicago White Sox 3 to 1 under the lights. Southpaw Al Milnar yielded seven hits as he turned in his seventh victory.

Witnessed by a crowd of 42,039, the victory gave Cleveland a full-game edge over the second-place New York Yankees who dropped a 7-to-6 decision to the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Tribe clubbed bespectacled Bill Dietrich for seven safe blows, including Jeff Heath's twelfth home run of the season, and collected two more off Lee Ross, who relieved Dietrich in the eighth.

Cleveland opened the scoring in the third inning as Gene Desautels singled, advanced on a sacrifice, stole third and crossed the plate on Lou Boudreau's fly.

The White Sox tied it up in the next frame on singles by Taft Wright and Luke Appling, a walk and a fielder's choice. Heath's double, a walk and Gee Walker's single put the Tribe ahead in the sixth, and Heath's homer sewed it up in the eighth.

St. Louis, June 27.—The Cardinals broke their first-place tie with the idle Brooklyn Dodgers and went a half game out in front in the hot National League race by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, tonight on Don Padgett's eighth-inning homer with a mate on base.

Night Game

A crowd of 16,063 paying customers saw Padgett, Cardinal handyman, blast his fifth round-tripper of the season to break a 3-3 deadlock and give Lefty Max Lanier his sixth mound victory against three defeats.

Harris Checks Tigers, Browns Beat Jinx, 9-0

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 27.—Four-hit pitching by Bob Harris ended today the most depressing jinx of the St. Louis Browns who defeated the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 0. It was the first St. Louis victory here in 15 starts since April 16, 1940.

Harris permitted only seven Tigers to get on base and none advanced beyond second as he was credited with his fourth victory of the season. The Brownies meanwhile gathered 13 safeties off Paul Trout and Luther Thomas. Walt Judnich's two-run single in the second inning ended the stay of Trout, who was charged with his third defeat against five victories.

Bill Zuber Gets Starting Chance Against Red Sox

Manager Bucky Harris will unveil Bill Zuber as a starting pitcher for the Nats today against the Boston Red Sox.

Since being purchased from Cleveland two months ago for the $7,500 waiver price, Zuber has figured only in relief roles with the Nats. The big right-hander has had little success. Harris, however, is determined to withhold Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson for the Yankee doubleheader tomorrow, and said last night:

"I'm giving Zuber a shot for his white alley.—Every other man on the club has had his starting chance except Bill."

33-Year-Old Rider Passes at Montreal; Leaves Wife and Son

By the Associated Press

Montreal, June 27.—Thomas Fowler, 33-year-old jockey, whose efforts to make weight for flat races were said to have undermined his health, died yesterday at the nearby village of St. Laurent, only a stone's throw from the King's Park Racetrack.

According to police who investigated the death, Fowler arrived here in his automobile a few days ago and was feeling ill at the time. His car was registered from Washington, D. C.

Fowler, widely known in Washington for his riding, is survived by his wife, Lucille; their 6-year-old son, Robert, and by his mother and two married sisters, all living here. His mother, Mrs. Nellie Fowler, lives at Columbia Hospital,

'The Babe' Evens Golf Series With Cobb, 1 Up

By Bob Considine.

New York, June 27.—Babe Ruth evened matters with Ty Cobb today at Fresh Meadow Country Club in their charity golf rivalry by beating the Georgia Peach 1-up on the nineteenth green, after Cobb had tied the match in the homestretch of the regulation 18.

The Bambino whammed out a 250-yard drive on the extra hole, and slapped his way home to a dependable bogie 5, on the 437-yard layout. Cobb's quick, nervous drive jigged into the bushes. He made a nice recovery and then punched a fine iron shot to within 20 feet of the green. But, though Cobb was clearly the better putter, he took three putts from 20 feet and missed his chance to prolong the match by blowing a 5-footer.

It was probably the most seriously contested bad golf in the recent history of the game. But the slim and disappointing crowd of 500 cheered every miscue with almost as much fervor as it cheered such outstanding shots as Ruth's long brassie to the green on the first hole.

The match consumed 3 hours and 30 minutes, most of it because Cobb, the tingling-nerved old baseball Tiger, got the "yips" on many greens and would step back and line up his putts several times per putt. The Babe, whose hair was held back by a giant bobby-pin, would then

Mel Ott Hits Homer, Giants Beat Phils, 7-4

By the Associated Press

New York, June 27.—Concentrating all their scoring in two innings, the New York Giants handed the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-to-4 whipping tonight. Mel Ott hit his eighteenth homer of the season in the third inning.

Nick Etten, slugging first baseman of the Phils, smashed a three-run homer, his tenth of the year, off Bill Lohrman in the first inning but was injured in the fourth frame in a collision with Johnny Rucker at first base.

Etten was knocked unconscious and was taken to Polyclinic Hospital, where he was still being examined when the game ended. He complained of pains about the neck.

Lohrman pitched eight-hit ball and had no trouble keeping the Phillies subdued after the first inning.

The Giants, held to a total of five hits, scored four runs in their half of the first. Tom Hughes, who started the game, walked the first two men and gave a single to Harry Danning for the first run. St. Johnson took over and was charged with the loss. A grounder by Babe Young and Odell Hale's double added three more runs that frame.

The game drew 26,943.

Maybe That Song Gave Phils' Boss His Inspiration

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 27.—Gerry Nugent, president of the National League Phillies, indicated today the club is in for a shakeup.

"I have all the patience and indulgence anyone can ask for," he said. "But there is a limit to it and I've just about reached that point. There are going to be some changes made—just as soon as we can get replacements."

"We thought," Nugent said, "that the older players, like Merrill May, Johnny Rizzo and Joe Marty would carry the youngsters Danny Litwhiler, Nick Etten, Mickey Livingston, Stan Benjamin and Harry Marnie, but it's been the other way around."

Nugent said he knew nothing about reports that Rogers Hornsby, former major league manager, would succeed Doc Protho as manager. "You can't blame Doc," Nugent said. "No manager can go up there and bat for his men."

DiMaggio Hits Safely In 39th Game

Homer by 'Clipper' Fails to Stave Off Defeat; Dick Siebert's Double Wins in 9th

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 28.—Joe DiMaggio kept right on hitting today, getting a single and his seventeenth home run of the season to run his streak to 39 consecutive games, but the New York Yankees were nosed out by the Philadelphia Athletics 7 to 6.

The Yanks' slugging centerfielder, striving to pass George Sisler's 19-year-old record of hitting safely in 41 straight games, singled in his first time at bat to send Johnny Sturm home in the first inning.

His home run came in the seventh inning and was the thirty-sixth by a Yankee over a record string of 22 consecutive games.

The game itself was a see-saw affair. The A's made nine hits, including four doubles, off Marvin Breuer in the first six innings to take a 5 to 3 lead. Frank Hayes hit his ninth homer off Charley Stanceu in the eighth.

The Yankees used three pinch hitters successfully in the ninth and managed to tie the score on a single by Frenchy Bordagaray, a double by Red Ruffing and a single by Frank Crosetti. Tom Ferrick was rushed to the rescue of Chubby Dean ahead of Crosetti's blow and stopped the rally after intentionally walknig DiMaggio.

Then the A's waded into Norman Branch to run their total hits to 13 and tally the winning run on a single by Bob Johnson and a double by Dick Siebert.

Dom DiMaggio Unfit For Army, Board Says

Eyesight of Bosox Star Bad, Boston's Draft Doctors Find

By International News Service

Boston, June 27.—Second major league baseball star to be declared physically unfit for military service is outfielder Dom DiMaggio of the Boston Red Sox.

The fleet-footed center fielder was deferred because of bad eyesight by Draft Board 10 of Boston. The report has been forwarded to draft authorities in San Francisco, where DiMaggio is registered.

DiMaggio, who is batting at a .319 clip for the pennant-minded Red Sox, is forced to wear heavily lensed glasses at all times and has a specially constructed pair for ball-playing purpos

Johnny Rigney, Chicago White Sox pitcher, was turned down by Army doctors because of a perforated ear drum.

DOM DiMAGGIO

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Yanks Are Coming!

Clark Griffith, the old showman, could not have plotted a better crowd-pulling act for his Griffith Stadium matinees than the unsolicited number that is about to fall into his lap tomorrow. As it happens, Joe DiMaggio will be in town.

POVICH

Barring the slim possibility that Philadelphia pitching will stop DiMaggio's consecutive game hitting streak today, the Yankee Clipper will have hit in 40 straight games when the Nats and Yankees take the field tomorrow. Griffith Stadium may be the scene of baseball history in the making.

If he had conspired the whole affair, Griffith could not have set the trappings for a more attractive doubleheader with the Yanks. In the first game, DiMaggio will be out there trying to tie the record of hitting in 41 consecutive games, set by George Sisler in 1922. In the second game, if he has succeded in tying the record, he will be shooting for a new record all his own. That is, of course, unless Philadelphia pitching shuts him out today.

For 19 years, Sisler's 1922 feat has withstood all assaults. The closest challenge we can recall was that of Heinie Manush, who was with the Nats in the pennant winning year of 1933. Manush had hit in 34 consecutive games as the Nats moved into Chicago for a doubleheader. That morning, this department acclaimed Manush as a sure-shot to surpass Sisler's record. Our glowing piece about Manush's hitting talents jinxed him. Manush went hitless despite the fact that both games of the doubleheader went 12 innings, giving him 13 chances in which to get a hit.

If DiMaggio is the man, who betters Sisler's mark, it will be entirely meet and proper, because the San Francisco flailer is one of the great hitters of the game. His classic stroke with the bat has become model stuff in most baseball schools. If he has a weakness, none of the American League pitchers has discovered it. That recalls Buck Newsom's boasts in 1936, the year DiMaggio broke into the big league.

He Has a Weakness—for Three Baggers

Newsom, never the one to concede that any hitter had an edge on him, was slightly contemptuous of DiMaggio when Joe, as a mere rookie with the Yankees, started off at a hot batting base. "I'll stop him," said Buck. "I know his weakness. I've seen him hit, and he can be pitched to."

Buck got his chance, shortly, to pitch to DiMaggio. It was in a game at Yankee Stadium. On the first pitch Newsom threw, DiMaggio tripled to left field. Two innings later, DiMaggio tripled again. Before the game was over, DiMaggio banged a third triple. The irrepressible Newsom was unconvinced, however.

"I told you I knew his weakness," said Buck. "That guy's got a weakness for three-base hits—and chocolate ice cream."

DiMaggio and his batting stroke are an annual feature of the official American League baseball film that is distributed coast to coast to audiences numbering in the millions. Slow motion shows his wide stance and his almost infinitesmal stride as he swings. His left foot moves forward only a couple of inches in contrast to the noticeable step most batters take. DiMaggio is virtually flat-footed in the box, which is, perhaps, the secret of his power. Jack Dempsey always said he punched better because he never punched from his toes.

At a $25,000 purchase price, DiMaggio has proved one of the greater bargains of baseball. The Red Sox blundered when they turned him down at $50,000. They were scared off by a report that DiMaggio had hurt his leg in a taxicab accident on the Coast. There must have been something to that report, because the Yanks succeeded in hacking down the price on him from $50,000 to a mere half.

The Sphinx Had Nothing on DiMaggio

When he came up to the majors, DiMaggio could have given the Sphinx a pretty good run for it in a long-distance silence contest. He was the bane of interviewers, and dismissed them with a few curt monosyllabic answers. But baseball, its travels and its associations has brought him out. Joe is a hail fellow, nowadays, no doit at making small talk and not at all distrustful of people.

Commonly overlooked in the enthusiasm for the fellow's hitting prowess is the fact that he is just about the best fielding outfielder in the league. In fact, the only man who is within whispering distance of him as a center fielder is his brother Dominic, of the Red Sox. Joe's throwing arm is the terror of base runners. In the outfield, he doesn't run, he glides. He plays a closer center field than any man in the league except his brother Dom, and the reason is, of course, that he can play close because he can go back fast, if necessary.

He's got a sense of humor. Only last season, he was bemoaning his failure to get three home runs in a game against Boston. He had hit two, and made a terrific bid for a third with a 430-yard drive into center field that was caught. "My father's to blame for that last catch," said Joe. "If he had been satisfied with four sons instead of five, Dominic would never have been around to catch that ball."

Bucs and Playful Fan Too Much For Cubs—They Lose, 4 to 2

'Tenth Man' Hops on Field in Eighth and Steals Show Before John Laws Give Him the Pitch

Chicago, June 27.—The slumping Chicago Cubs had to contend with a "tenth man" in the field for Pittsburgh today, but even removal of the playful fan by police failed to help the Bruins' cause and they lost for the sixth time in their last seven starts, 4 to 2.

It was in the eighth inning with the Cubs at bat that the frolicsome fan, garbed in a tan slack suit, leaped from a box, took up a position as fifth infielder for the Bucs, to the right field side of second base, and motioned for the game to proceed.

Two policemen converged on him, whereupon he dashed for third base and executed a perfect hook slide. Up immediately, he dusted himself off, to the delight of a ladies' day crowd of 14,122, and repeated the performance at second.

Four ushers helped the policemen persuade him to leave the field. He was booked for disorderly conduct at the Town Hall station, where police said he identified himself as Robert McGowan, of Chicago.

When play was resumed, a bounder off Bill Nicholson's bat cut First Baseman Elbie Fletcher above the right eye and forced him to retire.

Even so, the game progressed into the ninth, tied two all until four singles—by Al Lopez, Truett Sewell, Arky Vaughan and Rip Collins—gave the Bucs two runs and a decision over Claude Passeau, who permitted a total of 14 hits. Sewell gave up six in scoring his seventh victory, the only Cub runs scoring in the sixth on Phil Cavarretta's double.

Blozis Heads D. C. Entry in National A. A. U. Track Meet

7 Athletes From W.A.A. To Compete

Two-Day Competition At Philadelphia Lists Nation's Top Stars; Blozis Seeks Marks

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, June 27.—District interest in the National A. A. U. field and track championships at Franklin Field tomorrow and Sunday will center on big Al Blozis and a contingent of representatives of the Washington Athletic Association.

Blozis, defending champion in the shotput and a strong contender for the discus title held by Phil Fox, of Olympic Club, will represent the New York A. C. which may also employ one or two other Georgetown trackmen, particularly Ken Lyden.

W. A. A. Entries

Entered from Washington A. A. with the aid of funds advanced by the local A. A. U. are Jim Kehoe, Tommy Fields, Heckert Horn and Gene Ocsenreiter, all past or present University of Maryland stars; Johnny Corbett, Catholic University's long-distace ace; John Leiss, also a distance man, and Eddie Barham, Tech High School's crack high jumper. The W. A. A. squad will be handled by Dorsey Griffith, coach of Catholic University, and Yank Robbins, of the D. C. A. A. U.

Kehoe, who won the junior 800-meter championship in record-breaking time last year, will step into the senior ranks Sunday. Fields is expected to compete in both the junior and senior 1,500-meter runs, Corbett in the 1,500 and 5,000 meters, Ochsenreiter in the junior and senior 400 meters, Hornr in the discus and Leiss in the 10,000 meters, and Barham in the junior high jump.

This afternoon's events are all junior championships, which is for men who have never won an A. A. U., I. C., 4-A or N. C. A. A. title. Tomorrow's competition will bring out the seniors, including such behemoths of the track world as Greg Rice, Fred Wolcott, Les MacMitchell, Barney Ewell, Hal Davis, Les Steers, Archie Harris and Cornelius Warmerdam.

Olympic Club Favored

Olympic Club of San Francisco, although outmanned by N. Y. A. C., is favored to retain its team championship on the strength of an expected eight first places. Coach Charley Hunter anticipates victories from the following:

Davis, the slow-starting but fast-finishing sprinter from Salinas, who will defend his 100 and 200 meters crowns.

Warmerdam, who has cleared 15 feet or better eight times in two years, and Steers, who had done 6 feet 11 inches to retain their pole vault and high-jumping titles.

Grover Klemmer, the Southern California star, to repeat in the 400 meters.

Tom Montgomery, 6 feet 8 and 270 pounds, to lead the 56-pound weight throwers.

Boyd Brown to beat Southern California's Bob Peoples in the javelin.

And Phil Fox, who is counted on to get at least second behind Harris in the discus and runner-up to Blozis in the shot put.

Aganist this N. Y. A. C. is said to be reasonably certain of bagging only two firsts, by Blozis in the shotput and by Joe McCluskey in the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

Of all the defending champions the 245-pound Blozis is given the best chance to repeat. As a matter of fact the experts have long since given up picking anyone to upset the Georgetown University football star in his specialty. With Blozis, it is not so much a question as to whether he'll win the shotput, but whether he'll finally smash Jack Torrance's world's outdoor record of 57 feet 1 inch. To date big Al's best mark has been 56 feet 6¼ inches.

Zivic and Davis O. K. For Next Week's Fight

New York, June 27 (INS).—Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic and Al (Bummy) Davis today were pronounced in fine physical trim for their 12-round nontitle return match at the Polo Grounds next Tuesday.

Appearing before the New York Boxing Commission, they exchanged a number of wisecracks about fouling, but Gen. John Phelan, commission chairman, said, "I'll have none of that," and peace was restored.

Zivic was awarded the decision in their first meeting when Davis was disqualified for low blows.

Ray Brownell, Stewart Gain College Final

By International News Service

Columbus, Ohio, June 27.—In semifinal matches unprecedented in the 44-year history of the National Collegiate Golf Tournament, Earl Stewart, of Louisiana State University, and Ray Brownell, of Stanford, swung their way into the finals of the collegiate classic tonight.

Never before has the tournament witnessed the desperately fought battles that were waged today for the right to play for the national collegiate title.

Stewart, red-haired medalist from Dallas, Tex., defeated Otto Greiner, of the University of Baltimore, on the thirty-eighth green, while Brownell went 40 holes before downing Danny Carmichael, jr., of Princeton.

It was the first time in the long and colorful history of the collegiate meet that both semifinal matches had gone into extra holes.

Stewart, one of the coolest amateurs in the country, sank a 10-foot putt for a par 4 on the thirty-eighth green, while the Baltimore ace, tenth ranking amateur, missed a 12-foot putt in his desperate try for a par and another extra hole.

Stewart's victory was a story of a great uphill fight. In the morning round he was 4 down at the eleventh, but staged a brilliant rally to go 1 up at the halfway mark.

Again in the second half of the 36-hole match, he fell 2 down at the thirty-second, but again rallied to even the match by winning the thirty-third and thirty-fourth. Stewart and Greiner halved the thirty-fifth, thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh to set the stage for the Texan's match-making putt on the thirty-eighth green.

Brownell, one of Stanford's great quartet which swept to the team title earlier in the week, won the 40-hole clash from Carmichael, a Columbus, Ohio, boy, with a birdie on the 506-yard fortieth. His winning putt was from about 4 feet out, while Carmichael barely missed his birdie on a great chip shot from the steep bunker behind the green.

Hunt Enters Finals Of College Tennis

Middie Star Turns Back Stubborn Vanderbilt Entry in Straight Sets; Faces Coast Star

By the Associated Press

Haverford, Pa., June 27.—Midshipman Joe Hunt had to bring out his heaviest guns today to down little Joe Davis, of Vanderbilt University, and win his way into the finals of the National Intercollegiate Tennis tournament for the second straight year.

The top-seeded Naval Academy student, fourth ranking player in the Nation, won in straight sets, 6—3, 8—6, 8—6, at the Merion Cricket Club.

Hunt will play second-seeded Ted Olewine, University of Southern California sophomore, tomorrow afternoon for the championship. Hunt lost to Don McNeill, of Kenyon College, in the 1940 title match.

The slender Vanderbilt youngster put up a stubborn battle against the tournament favorite, staving off match point three times.

He seemed nervous in dropping the first set to Hunt, but rallied brilliantly in the second frame to roll up a 5-1 lead. Hunt put on pressure to take the next four games to tie it up. Davis won the next game and had set point twice before Hunt fought off the challenge. He forced Davis to net to tie at 6—6, then won the next two games for the set.

The Nashville youth, who eliminated two seeded players in advancing to the semifinals, led Hunt, 5—4, in the third set, but again the midshipman rallied. Hunt took a spill in the eleventh game, but returned after a few minutes' rest to win two straight games. In the fourteenth game, Davis stopped three match points before going down to defeat.

While Hunt was heavily favored to trounce Davis and is expected to win the championship over Olewine tomorrow, today's semifinal doubles matches produced a major upset.

Larry Dee and Jim Wade, Stanford's defending doubles champions, fell before Olewine and his Trojan teammate, Charley Mattman, in a torrid five-set struggle, 9—7, 2—6, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

In the other semifinal, Bob Hippenstiel and Bill Canning, University of California, defeated Bill Reedy and George Toley, Southern California, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4.

Senate Scores As Zanelotti Stars Afield

A masterful fielding performance by Jerry Zanelotti was all that stood between Senate Beer and its second defeat of the year last night in Ballston Stadium, as the league-leaders throttled a seventh-inning rally to trip Plaza Wine and Liquor, 6-5, in a Merchants Night League softball game.

Zanelotti, Senate's clever shortstop, cut off four potential runs with sensational stops, and wound up one of the finest individual exhibitions of the season when he cut down Sawteli at first with the tying run on third base. In all, the Italian infielder handled nine chances perfectly.

Young Billy Sullivan went the distance for the Beerman and gave up six hits, as did Roger Sawtell, Plaza's hurler. Senate got behind in the first inning when Hop Lomax tallied on a wild pitch, but tied the score in the second and went ahead with a three-run outburst in the third.

In an exhibition game, International Business Machines handed Greenbelt its first defeat, coming from behind to win, 7-5.

Mrs. Torlinski Wins In Army-Navy Golf

Mrs. M. J. Torlinski won the Army and Navy Spring Handicap Match Play Championship in upset fashion over Mrs. M. K. Barroll, 3 and 2.

Mrs. Torlinksi had only one handicap stroke and used that to win the first hole. Mrs. Barroll, medalist with an 88, was five down and five to play but extended the match to the sixteenth green.

Mrs. Davy Wins 8 and 7 Match In Md. Golf

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Winning every hole but the par threes in probably the greatest rout in the semifinals of a Maryland State championship, Mr. Myron Davy marched into the finals of the women's tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase with an 8-and-7 victory over Jeannette Myers, of the Suburban Club in Baltimore.

Thus for the second straight year the Columbia Club player has a final crack at the Old Line State title and this time her final-round opponent will be Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, Kenwood's consistent performer who advanced with a 4-and-2 triumph over Mrs. Maurice Glick, of Baltimore's Woodholme Club.

Mrs. Davy, whose golf this past week has been nothing short of sensational, including a medal winning 80, a 6-and-5 victory over Mrs. L. G. Pray and a 3-and-2 triumph over Mrs. Leo Walper, lost in the finals last year at Hillendale to Mrs. Walter R. Stokes.

Has Scare

Mrs. Meckley had a nine-hole scare from Mrs. Glick before the favored Washingtonian pulled ahead on the back nine to insure an all-District final in the twenty-first renewal of the State women's championship. They turned all even but on the very first hole of the return trip Mrs. Meckley holed a 60-foot approach shot for a birdie deuce and it was her match from that point.

Miss Myers, who with Mrs. Glick was somewhat of a surprise semifinalist, had few illusions about the Davy match after the first hole. For Mrs. Davy whipped a pair of wood shots to the first green and dropped on 8-footer for a birdie 3 and a 1 up lead. Miss Myers halved the fourth with a regulation par 3 as Mrs. Davy chipped up for a halve and the next one the Baltimorean halved was the ninth, in fours. Mrs. Davy turned 7 up.

They halved the tenth hole in bogey fours and congratulations were in order when Mrs. Davy won the eleventh hole with a five. The winner was out in 39 to Miss Myers' 48.

Mrs. Glick was touted as a tough customer in match play by her Baltimore golfing partners and she proved just that. Mrs. Meckley took advantage of her opponent's three putts to go one up on the fourth and she went two up at the sixth. Mrs. Glick squared matters just two holes later, however, winning the seventh when Mrs. Meckley was in trouble and the eighth by dropping a 15-footer for a par five.

Trap Trouble

Mrs. Meckley's birdie on the tenth and trap trouble by Mrs. Glick on the eleventh gave the former a two-hole lead but on the twelfth Mrs. Meckley was trapped off the tee and lost the hole and half her lead. Mrs. Glick couldn't seem to hit the greens in the required shots from this point and lost three of

Morris Lone D. C. Publinx Golf Qualifier

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 27.—Baltimore golfers, led by Bill Cole, medalist, with a one-over-par 36-hole score of 145, today copped five of the six places allotted the Baltimore-Washington district in the National Public Links Championship Tournament at Spokane, Wash., July 14-19.

Cole, an oil company salesman, shot near-perfect golf to turn in a 73 in the morning round, an even par 72 for the afternoon 18 over the long, rolling, heavily trapped fairways of the Mount Pleasant Course, where the publinks tourney was held in 1939.

Lone Washingtonian to qualify was Bob Morris, a statistical clerk in a Government agency, who turned in a 78-76—154.

Others Who Made Grade

Other qualifiers, all Baltimoreans, were:

Lawrence Wisner, material checker at Edgewood Arsenal, 75-76—151.

Mann and Sperandeo won their places in a one-hole play-off with Andy Oliveri, of Washington, and J. K. Scales, of Baltimore, who all tied with 155s. Mann and Sperandeo shot 5s on the play-off hole to 6s for Oliveri and Scales.

Oliveri, Scales, George Molloy, of Washington, and Leroy Smith, of Washington, were named alternates. Molloy and Smith both had 156s.

Oliveri Misses Tough Putt

Weisner, Meyer and Morris have qualified for former tournaments. Oliveri, seeking a place in his fourth straight tourney, missed his chance when his second putt on the play-off hole rimmed the cup.

Scores of most of the players in the starting field of 72 skyrocketed into the 160s and beyond. No golfer other than Cole even threatened par.

Notes From Out Black Book

New York, June 27.—SPORTIN' AROUND:

To give you some idea as to how tough it is to win 30 games, Bobby Feller must win 14 out of his probable 20 starts between now and the end of the season, in order to make the grade . . . That's tough, even for a guy whose record is now 16 wins and three losses, out of 19 starts and two relief jobs, and who has won only two less games than have the Phillies . . . We think the Phillies should be given the boot out of the big show on the charge of fraud—impersonating a big league organization. There must be a dozen minor league teams that are better . . . Has anyone suspected Jimmy Dykes of talking that hole in Jimmy Rigney's ear? . . . Ty Cobb's method of breaking a batting slump was to take batting practice from a pitcher who hurled the ball at him from a distance of 40 feet, instead of the usual 60 feet 6 inches.

CONSIDINE

Mrs. Lou Gehrig is reluctant to lead the parade to centerfield at the stadium on July 4, for the unveiling of the players' tablet to dear old Lou, and we can't blame her . . . That's a good tag for the Davis-Zivic fight "Bummy vs. Thumby" . . . Mike Jacobs probably will be the promoter for the new 20,000 seat armory your Federal taxes recently erected in Washington, thanks to the realistic District of Columbia boxing commission. It's a pity, however, that the said commission doesn't insist that Joe Turner, who has been promoting around Washington for years, be at least the copromoter.

Craig Wood was restrained from cashing in on a big cigarette indorsement recently by a company to which he had sold his name, for peanuts, back in the days when he was just another pro . . . The handsome calendars sent out by the Hollywood Turf Club, with Challedon's picture on top, show the wrong silks on the Brann-gurgler . . . The new filly champ, Tangled, was foaled at Fred Koontz's Tulsa Farm, in sight of oil wells. She's the pride of the Black and Bluegrass.

Maybe There's a Fountain of Youth

Lou Nova will train at Grossinger's—the Upstate Jewish Country Club—because the New York boxing writers insist on it, so they can become better acquainted with the establishment's deathless Knishes, Lotkas, Borscht, Smetenah, Kreplach, Blintzes and Gefuelte Fish . . . If you must be served, then how do you account for the present success of Al Simmons, Lefty Grove, Ted Lyons, Charley Gehringer, Johnny Cooney, Bill Tilden, Gabby Hartnett, Si Johnson, Carl Hubbell—some of whom are crowding 40 and one of whom, Tilly, is crowding 50? . . . Speaking of Nova, he is one athlete completely bereft of superstition. He took Room 1313 at a local hotel the night before he knocked out Max Baer. He ignores the fact that his second, Ray Arcel, has dragged eight or nine Louis opponents back to their corners. Lou knows that Arcel is just about tops, and that's that. Lou's favorite spot for his hat, when he takes it off, is on a bed.

Pan Mail: "Whoops, M'Dear," brays A. B. Hunt, of La Mesa, Calif., "so Billy Conn, you say in your story of the fight, 'toppled with the slow and easy grace of a tall tree that falls majestically to earth under the axeman's blows. He fell lightly and lay there on the canvas, while the moths buzzed around him like miniature vultures, and a great crowd of 54,000 was almost silent.' Why don't you say, 'fluttered to the canvas like a wounded dove' You punk. The best thing Billy Conn ever did, or does, or ever will do, is back-pedal. Joe Lewis (!) is a gentleman as well as a most lovable character, and the greatest fighter the world has ever known or ever will know. The trouble with you and all other guys in your class is jealousy."

I resent all of the above, in the name of Class 3-A . . . Johnny Weissmueller's swimming prime was a good 15 years ago, but he comes close to record times in his daily workouts . . . One of the quickest kayos in the history of Madison Square Garden was the kayo suffered by Monte Proser's Garden Dance Hall . . . Mikey Walker is doing a weekly sports broadcast over a Poughkeepsie station . . . Bobby Riggs is playing in his thirteenth tournament this year, which makes us fear that if he doesn't watch out, he'll break that eight-tournament rule solemnly put in by the Tennis Association . . . Don Budge had a part of his ear surface grafted on to his chin and now whenever he sinks a fang in his favorite dish, Armenian shish kebab, the jaw noise is deafening. Don now absently cups his jaw when he doesn't quite hear you.

Billy Conn's Mother Dies In Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 27.—Mrs. Margaret McFarland Conn, 41, mother of Billy Conn and the inspiration behind his rise to fistic fame, died tonight after a long illness.

Mrs. Conn had been at death's door for weeks, and friends said only her will to live and not to "worry Billy" during his training for the heavyweight title fight with Champion Joe Louis last week had enabled her to hold out so long.

Only this week Billy flew home from New York to be at her bedside during a sinking spell. But fate had it that at the end Billy was in Ocean City, N. J., and attempts were made to notify him there tonight.

Billy, undefeated as light heavyweight champion, often said he wanted to win the heavyweight crown and all its riches so he "could give Mom everything she needs." As it was, he bought her a fine home and provided all possible medical care for her.

Mrs. Conn, her son's most loyal rooter, was convinced that some day he would be the heavyweight champion. Billy got his big chance in New York June 18, but fell victim to the Brown Bomber in the thirteenth round.

Skinker Bows In Semifinals At Greenwich

By the Associated Press

Greenwich, Conn., June 27.—A 35-foot putt on the eighteenth green gave lanky Bob Edwards, of the Brunswick School, a 1-up victory over Earle Skinker, of Devitt Prep, of Washington, today in the semifinal round of the Eastern Interscholastic Golf Championships at the Greenwich Country Club.

Bill Campbell, of Exeter, defeated Horace Cook, of Lawrenceville, 3 and 2, in the other semifinal match and will meet Edwards, Greenwich boy, in the 36-hole final tomorrow.

Edwards was three down to Skinker on the tenth tee, but he won the tenth with a 40-foot putt for a birdie two, and took the next two holes with pars. Skinker took the fifteenth after halving the thirteenth and fourteenth. The sixteenth and seventeenth were halved and Edwards took the match with his big putt on the final hole.

Campbell stayed in front of Cook throughout their match.

In the morning quarter-final, Skinker eliminated Chuck Davis, of Lawrenceville, 4 and 3, while Campbell beat Henry Lubke, of Peddie, by a similar score. Edwards defeated Jim Thompson, of Peddie, 5 and 4, and Cook disposed of Alvin Mayer, of Brunswick, 2 up.

Cameo Beats Heurich, 3 to 1

Walter James Hurls Victory Giving Champs But Seven Safeties

A big first inning, in which it spliced two hits with as many wild pitches by Art Lacey for 3 runs, gave Cameo Furniture nine a 3-1 victory over the Heurich Brewers and The Washington Post-Industrial League lead yesterday on the Ellipse.

Walter James, lanky right-hander, set last year's city champions down with 7 hits and was in difficulty only in the fourth frame when the Brewers managed for their only score. "Pepco" Barry singled with one out, stole second, and came home on Huck Stahl's clean single.

Lacey, who started on the mound for Heurich, started shakily by walking "Booty" McQuinn in the first inning. Godfrey single McQuinn to second and Bucky Buscher doubled into deep right to score McQuinn. Godfrey tallied on the first of Lacey's wild tosses, and Buscher scored on the second.

Despite their setback, the Brewers also enjoyed 7-hit pitching. Lacey gave up 6 in as many innings, and Johnny Murhane allowed 1 in the last two. Godfrey was the only man in the game to get a pair of safeties.

M. A. Tennis Meet Starts Today

To the surprise of no one, Barney Welsh was top-seeded yesterday in the draw for the annual Middle Atlantic tennis championships opening this afternoon at Columbia Country Club.

Barney the Unbeatable, got top billing because of his No. 1 District ranking in 1940 and his recent victory in the City of Washington championships. Following Welsh on the seeded list are Don Leavens, the City of Washington finalist; Davie Johnsen, the defending champion, and Hugh Lynch, Charley Channing, Bill Breese, Frank Shore and Buddy Adair.

A conspicuous absentee from the tournament is Dick Murphy, No. 5 District player, who will be kept from participating by other obligations.

Since Dever Hobbs and Alex Kieles, of Baltimore are the only formidable out-of-town entries, it is a foregone conclusion that the title will remain in Washington once again. Not in the last ten years has any one but a District player taken this crown.

Unless there is a stunning upset, Welsh will gain the finals without much difficulty and awaiting him there, in all probability will be Lynch or Leavens who met for that doubtful honor in the semi-finals of the City of Washington tourney.

Camouflaged Cameo Run—Dust and All

It might be a young tornado brewing, but that's Cameo's Godfrey plowing into home plate with what proved the winning run in the first inning of yesterday's Post-Industrial League game with the Heurich Brewers. Catcher Fee Colliere missed the ball. Cameo pulled out a 3-1 decision

Gay Boo, a $38.80 Shot, Surprises Charles Town Talent

Scores Over Lead Please And Mr. Jim

Comes in by a Length In Feature; Camera Decides Place; Sam Palumbo Wins Twice

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—With little to recommend him except that he was taking off weight, Gay Boo, owned by E. C. Allnutt, of Rockville, Md., emerged from maiden ranks to the tune of a $38.80 mutuel here today. His victory came in the Judge Larkin Purse, featuring the Friday program and in a test of about 6 furlongs. With Jockey George Cardoza in the saddle, the son of Boo and Fair Sun forged to the finish line a length in advance of a photo finish for second money in which the Flamingo Farms Mr. Jim was given the nod over H. O. Wilt's Lead Please.

This was the first time in his career that Gay Boo has been in the money. He was clocked in the ordinary time of 1:16 3-5 for the Charles Town course. A crowd of 6,000 saw the upset.

Quick Vine was installed favorite in the field of eight and the daughter of Haste got away on top. Radio Charm ran with the leader, while Gay Boo was steadied along in third position. On the backstretch, Radio Charm shook off Quick Vine and that was the signal for Cardoza to put Gay Boo to a drive. He asked the 3-year-old colt for speed and he responded by sailing past the leader. Charm, put to pressure, rallied again and then weakened. Mr. Jim and Lead Please then came along with their drives, too late to threaten the flying leader.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo rode the first two winners on the card. In the first race he booted June Pennant, a $9 paddock tip, to victory over Red Horizon and Nassau's Beau. In the second event, he brought the favored Red Wings to the wire in advance of Time Passes and Golden Dial. Red Wings' triumph paved the way for a $16.80 daily double. Jockey Bletzacker put the finishing touches on the transaction by winning with Charming Boy in the third race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME SCOUT, $4.60, $3.20, $2.40; SNUGGLE, $7.80, $3.80; MEADOW GOLD, $3.40.

TIME SCOUT, held in early restraint, was sent to MEADOW GOLD rounding first turn, drew out under punishment and held sway thereafter under driving tactics. SNUGGLE passed tiring horses to close stoutly. MEADOW GOLD weakened after setting pace under pressure. MISS MINT DROP ran an even race.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at same. Winner, E. C. Allnutt's br. c. (3), by Boo—Fair Sun. Trained by E. R. Routt. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:16⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY BOO, $38.80, $12.20, $6.80; MR. JIM, $3.60, $3.20; LEAD PLEASE, $13.60.

GAY BOO, well placed from start, moved to leaders boldly on backstretch, disposed of RADIO CHARM to take command and drew out at close. MR. JIM, allowed to settle into strides, closed a rap. LEAD PLEASE improved position gradually, saved ground turning for home and hung. RADIO CHARM was used racing QUICK VINE into submission.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:00½. Winner, J. E. Hughes' b. m. Capital Transit Net Leaps 50% During Month

Capital Transit Co. yesterday reported net income in May leaped 50 per cent above that in the same month last year.

In a report filed with the Public Utilities Commission, the Washington trolley and bus line revealed net earnings last month totaled $156,862 against $104,528 in May, 1940. Operating revenues for the month were $1,363,881 as compared with $1,125,812 last year.

Operating expenses in May were $866,805 against $740,854 in 1940, while total expenses including taxes and depreciation were $1,146,517 as compared with $961,140 last year, an increase of 19 per cent.

For the first five months this year, Capital Transit reported net income of $527,718, a gain of 74 per cent over the $302,046 in the same 1940 period.

Reflecting the tremendous population increase here during the year, revenue passengers carried in the first five months totaled 89,122,270 against 76,310,558 in the like 1940 period. Revenue passengers carried in May totaled 19,979,243 against 16,114,415 in May, 1940.

Gas Net Shrinks

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported net income of $78,367 in May as compared with $114,638 in the same 1940 month. Operating revenues totaled $671,900 in the month, a drop of $54,615 as compared with 1940. Operating expenses totaled $565,760, against $568,244 last year.

The result of operations for the first five months of this year was a net income of $1,060,372, against $1,107,490 for the same period in 1940, a decrease of $47,118. All of this decrease resulted from an increase in taxes, which amounted to $108,208 for this period.

The report also shows gas sales of 991,793 M (thousand) cubic feet for the month compared with 1,067,384 M cubic feet for May last year. There were 170,316 meters in service in the District of Columbia on May 31, a 7 per cent increase over last year. The company expended approximately $147,000 in May and $571,000 in the first five months of this year for extensions to its property in Washington.

C. & P. Net Off in May

Net income of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone in May totaled $157,105, which was $8,457 less than in the same month last year, the company reported yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission.

Operating revenues for May were $1,299,941, against $1,110,860 a year ago while operating expenses were $942,647 against $784,693 in May, 1940. Operating taxes in the month totaled $125,149 against $111,532 last year.

For the first five months, the telephone company reported net income of $851,042 as compared with $822,767 in the same 1940 period.

Total telephone calls in the first five months were 182,303,000 against 162,404,000 in the like 1940 period. Calls in May were 38,786,000 against 33,990,000 in May, 1940.

A net gain of 3,174 telephone stations was shown in May and 16,848 for the first five months. Telephones in service at the end of May totaled 292,093, a new high record, and compared with 260,881 stations in May, 1940.

Employment Reported Best In U. S. History

Secretary of Labor Perkins reported yesterday that total nonagricultural employment in May reached a new all-time peak of 38,278,000.

This, she said, was 800,000 higher than any employment peak reached during 1929.

The Secretary reported that all major groups of employment showed substantial gains last month over May, 1940.

Manufacturing employment increased 1,756,000 wage earners. Construction employment over this year was up 499,000 while trade showed an increase of 222,000. The May employment index for all industries was 124.7 per cent of the 1923-25 average as compared with 102.5 in May, 1940.

The May 1941 pay roll index was 141.9 per cent of the 1923-25 average as compared with 97.8 in May a year ago.

Sperry to Erect $20,000,000 Firm On Long Island

New York, June 27 (AP).—Sperry Gyroscope Co. announced today a factory to make both aircraft and anti-aircraft instruments would be started soon at North Hempstead, Long Island, to cost $20,000,000 with equipment.

Seven thousand new employes will be hired for the plant, the company said. The company expects ground to be broken within a week and manufacturing to start early in 1942.

The buildings will cover 1,350,000 square feet. To be known as the Lakeville Plant, it will be built under an arrangement with the Defense Plant Corporation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and will be in the property of the DPC and leased by Sperry.

The products will be gyroscopic flying instruments and special equipment for antiaircraft forces.

Capital Store Sales in Week Mount 28%

Washington department store sales in the week ended June 21 showed a 28 per cent gain over the same week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. The volume, however, was 1 per cent below sales in the preceding week.

In the four weeks ended June 14, store sales here were 16 per cent above the same 1940 period.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District in the week ended June 21, had a 25 per cent increase in store sales and in the four weeks ended June 21 the volume showed a 15 per cent gain over last year. The report for the Reserve district is based on figures from 19 leading department stores.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board estimated that department sales in the week ended June 21 were 17 per cent more than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended June 14 sales were 13 per cent above the similar period a year ago, and in the four weeks ended June 21 they averaged 14 per cent more than in the similar period last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, increases for the week ended June 21 over the similar week last year: Boston, 13; New York, 13; Philadelphia, 16; Cleveland, 17; Atlanta, 22; Chicago, 15; St. Louis, 17; Kansas City, 16; Dallas, 37, and San Francisco, 20 per cent.

Women Shoppers Warned to Watch Quality of Goods

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Women shoppers were cautioned today that many consumer goods are deteriorating in quality under the defense program, while prices remain the same.

Reign S. Hadsell, of the Consumers Counsel Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture, gave point to his warning with this example:

A percale dress, which formerly had 80 threads to the inch each way, and sold for a dollar, now has 68 threads one way and 72 the other, and sells for the same price.

Hadsell, speaking at the University of Chicago's annual conference on business education, said that "consumers are going to have to be better buyers than ever before."

Army Asks Bids On Meat Supply

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—The Army sent invitations to domestic packers today to bid on 7,404,432 pounds of fresh and canned meat to feed the troops on Southern maneuvers this summer.

Col. Henry B. Barry, commanding officer of the Chicago Quartermaster Depot, said bids would be opened here July 2 on 6,567,000 pounds of fresh, frozen boneless beef, 675,752 pounds of canned spiced pork luncheon meat and 161,640 pounds of canned whole hams.

Stocks Drift Lower in Indifferent Trading; Bounding Commodities Occupy Spotlight

New York, June 27.—Speculative forces centered their attention mainly on bounding commodity markets today and left stocks to shift for themselves at moderately lower levels.

The performance of the share list was indifferent from the start and a downward drift for most leaders continued to the close, while a few oils, aviations and specialties managed to contest the trend with modest advances, declines of fractions to a point or so were widespread.

News of Russian reverses—Moscow admitted withdrawals to new positions on the Western Front in the face of the Nazi push—was blamed by brokers principally for the setback in the securities department. Generally good business reports apparently aided individual stocks but failed to stimulate the market as a whole.

Notwithstanding bearish implications of the war picture, it was not overlooked that Friday relapses have been the rule in the share division for the past month or so. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off one-tenth of a point, at 41.7, and the last Friday on which it showed a small gain was May 16.

Lightness of offerings was comforting to recovery contingents. Transfers for the full proceedings dwindled to 408,640 shares compared with 533,390 yesterday.

Restraints to sentiment were seen in the growing governmental price-fixing campaign and the lack of definite information regarding the huge tax bill that will confront the Nation next year.

Considered by market analysts was a seasonal drop in this week's automotive production and an upturn in the country's retail spending to a peak for the year to date.

Prominent retreating shares were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Santa Fe, American Smelting, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Glenn Martin, American Can, Westinghouse, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber and International Harvester.

In a spotty Curb, improvement was shown for Brewster Aero, American Cyanamid "B," N. J. Zinc and Pennroad. In arrears were Glen Alden Coal, Gulf Oil, Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Sherwin Williams. Volume here was around 98,000 shares versus 106,000 Thursday.

A selected group of railroad bonds moved up fractions to a point or so in today's market but narrow changes and a slightly irregular trend ruled the general list.

Pacing the carrier section were a number of medium priced obligations of Midwestern and Southwestern roads which have reported a high volume of freight traffic in recent weeks as well as handsome increases in net income.

Pittsburgh & West Virginia 4½s bounded up 3⅝ points to 60; St. Paul general 4s gained 2, at 40, and advances of a point or more were registered by New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 5s at 46, St. Louis, Peoria & Northwestern 5s, at 40, and Northern Pacific 4s, at 74½.

Elsewhere modest improvement was shown by Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3¼s, Studebaker 6s, Texas Corporation 3s, and Goodrich 4¼s.

Schenley Distillers Corporation reported for nine months ended May 30 net income after ordinary charges but before excess profits taxes of $4,386,433, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $2.92 a share on the common stock.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation and subsidiaries other than European, Mexican, Cable and Radiotelegraph companies, reported net income for the March quarter of $178,192 compared with $406,500 for the March quarter of 1940. The report was before provision for possible losses by European subsidiaries as a result of war.

Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, a Koppers affiliate, reported net income available for dividends, after all charges, including estimated Federal taxes, would amount to $3,028,042 for the 12 months ended May 31. This compared with $2,787,682 for the same period a year ago.

Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. reported net operating profit of $2,475,658 for the 24-week period ended June 14 compared with $2,332,720 for the same period last year. This amounts to $1.35 a share on 1,833,686 shares of common stock, against $1.27 a share for the same period a year ago. Gross sales amounted to $132,029,564, an increase of $13,951,681, or 11 5-6 per cent.

Auto Output Starts Seasonal Decline

Detroit, June 27 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimating car and truck production this week at 127,926 units, said today that automobile assemblies have embarked on the seasonal downturn usual at this period.

Production compared with 133,565 vehicles last week and 87,550 this week a year ago. Ward's said operations would taper moderately during the first half of July and then would move downward more sharply.

Spring Pig Crop Seen Moderately Heavier

The Agriculture Department yesterday estimated the 1941 spring pig crop at 50,083,000 head compared with 50,066,000 in 1940. The estimate was based upon reports from 150,000 livestock farmers and covered production between last December 1 and June 1.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. How can I form the thrift habit necessary for me to buy many Defense Bonds now, to help the Government?

A. The easiest way is to instruct your employer or banker to hold back a small fraction of your salary or other income. Even 10 cents a day and a dollar on your birthday will mount up in one year to $37.50, the purchase price of a $50 Defense Bond. Bigger savings buy bigger bonds.

Q. How safe is a Defense Bond as an investment?

A. Entirely safe. The full faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged for payment of principal and interest on these bonds.

Note.—To purchase Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest postoffice or bank, or write for information to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington.

Milk Price Raised In Chicago Area

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Two major milk distributors announced today the price of milk would be raised 1 cent a quart on July 1 to compensate for increased labor costs and rising food markets.

The present price of home delivered grade A milk is 13 cents a quart. Storekeepers, who now buy milk from the dairies at 9½ cents, will be charged 10½ cents after July 1 and were expected to pass the raise along to customers.

These increases, along with raises of 3 cents a quart and 2 cents a pint in retail prices of cream, will cost consumers in the Chicago area nearly $400,000 a month, the dairies estimated.

Canada Drops Tariff On Sheet Iron Imports

Ottawa, Ont., June 27—(Canadian Press).—Understood to be a move to facilitate obtaining metals necessary for national defense, the national revenue department today announced an order in council placing sheet and strip of iron or steel, hot rolled, on the tariff free list for entry to Canada, effective June 28.

Strips of iron and steel formerly carried a tariff rate of $7 a ton when imported from the United States and $3 from England, and sheet a rate of $6 when from the United States and $4.25 from England. It now is on the free list from both countries.

Farm Staples Soar; Cotton At 11-Year Top

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 27.—Renewed buying of grain futures today lifted wheat and oats almost 2 cents a bushel to new highs since May, 1940, while soybeans soared 5 to more than 6 cents to the best levels in four years.

Buying of these commodities was largely in sympathy with continued strength of other products, such as cotton, which soared to the highest levels in 11 years, and cottonseed oil which reached 15-year peaks. Corn advanced almost a cent to four-year highs.

Aside from general commodity market bullishness, which traders attributed to rising consumer purchasing power and war time developments, including Government purchases of certain products, wheat was strengthened by limited hedging sales and strong spot market premiums reflecting the Government loan program, which is causing the bulk of new grain to be held off the market.

Wheat closed at the day's highs, 1⅞ to 1⅞ higher than yesterday, July, $1.06⅝@$1.06½; September, $1.07⅞@$1.08; corn, ½ to ⅞ up, July, 74⅞; September, 77¼@77⅛; oats, 1⅝ to 1⅞ higher; soybeans, 5 to 6¾ up; rye unchanged to 1¼ higher, and lard, 10 to 20 higher.

Buying of wheat came from mills, previous short sellers and other commercial and speculative interests. Increased interest was reported in the flour market in some localities and Government acceptances over the weekend from offerings currently being submitted by mills were expected to be large.

The upturn in oats was attributed partly to rumors that Government loans may be available on this grain. Its comparative cheapness also attracted some buying and there were reports from Western Indiana of oats deterioration due to hot weather.

Warning from Henderson

New York, June 27 (AP).—A general demand for vegetable oils and an advance in cotton pushed cottonseed oil futures 11 to 34 points upward to new 15-year highs today on sales of 483 contracts. The action brought a sharply worded warning from Price Administrator Leon Henderson that a ceiling would be put on the commodity.

Henderson aimed particularly at cottonseed oil but blasted generally at "people who are speculating in essential food commodities."

"It seems hard for a certain group of people to become accustomed to the idea that we do not intend to let prices get out of hand," Henderson said. "What looked to them like a profitable ride in commodities is going to turn out to be an expensive disaster."

Since last October, the administrator commented, crude cottonseed oil has risen from about 4.4 cents to 11.5 a pound.

The New York Produce Exchange a few minutes later set a margin requirement of $1,200 on all cottonseed oil and soy bean oil future contracts, effective June 30, an increase from $700.

$900,000,000 U. S. Revenues Set June High

By the Associated Press

The Treasury said yesterday June income and excess profits tax collections have exceeded $900,000,000—the largest figure for such collections in any June.

June 15 was the due date of the second installment of these taxes. In March, when the first installment was paid, collections were $1,207,000,000. However, the corporate excess profits tax was so new then, that many companies obtained postponements so that the June figure probably contained more excessive profits tax than the March figure. The two taxes are lumped together in field reports, and it may be several weeks before separate figures will be available.

Meanwhile, the Treasury said that on June 25, with five days of the month and also of the fiscal year yet to go, the month's collections of the two taxes were $900,751,819 and the fiscal year's total was $3,454,219,517—also a record. The fiscal year figure indicated a final total nearly $500,000,000 in excess of the January budgetary estimate of $3,055,000,000.

The fiscal year total of all types of Federal revenues passed the $7,012,930,000 budget estimate several days ago, and on June 25 had reached $7,528,713,439.

Expenditures, while also breaking peace time records, was lagging behind the budget estimate of $13,303,370,970. On June 25, spending aggregated $12,467,491,715.

Part of this lag was in the defense program. The June 25 defense spending total was $5,913,561,054, compared with the budget estimate for the full year of $6,463,923,900.

New Securities Set 1941 Peak

New York, June 27 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities for the week ended yesterday jumped to $116,150,819 for the highest total since the week of last December 19, Standard & Poor's Corporation reported today.

The increase was fairly evenly divided among municipal, public utility and railroad issues. More than $48,000,000 of the total was new money. All rail financing was new, as was 83 per cent of the municipals.

SEC Attempts Dictator Role, Court Is Told

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., June 27.—Counsel for the North American Co., giant utility fighting for permission to dissolve a subsidiary, argued in Federal court here today that the Securities and Exchange Commission should not set itself up "in the role of a dictator."

"It cannot be too strongly stressed," said S. Pearce Browning, jr., chief counsel for North American, "that the Public Utility Act gives the commission absolutely no power to require any holding company . . . to continue its own existence."

The argument was on an injunction asked by the SEC to restrain North American from voting its 83.49 per cent control for dissolution of an intermediate holding company, the North American Light & Power Co.

Asking judge John P. Nields to issue the injunction, Lawrence S. Lesser, SEC attorney, accused the $1,250,000,000 parent company of attempting to "side-step" SEC jurisdiction and "cut a sizable plum" by breaking up its subsidiary.

Lesser asserted that by the proposed dissolution North American would receive more than $14,000,000 for stock holdings valued at less than $8,000,000. He also said that this would result in a financial loss to Light & Power's minority security holders.

North American countered with the assertion that the plan as now outlined would bring it a loss of $15,000,000.

At the conclusion of argument lasting more than five hours, Judge Nields reserved decision on the S&C plea for the restraining order.

At his request, the opposing attorneys agreed to an adjournment of the Light & Power Co.'s stockholders' meeting scheduled here for next Monday. A new meeting was set for July 21 at 2 p. m.

Browning stipulated for the record that the parent company's stock would be voted Monday only for adjournment.

N.Y. Utility Awards $35,393,000 Issue To Insurance Firm

New York, June 27 (AP).—The New York State Electric & Gas Corp. today awarded to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States $35,393,000 first mortgage 3¼ per cent bonds, and thereby partially solved a problem arising from competitive bidding that has confronted company officials all week.

Last Monday the company's executives opened bids on the bond issue but threw out all of the four offers, including that of Equitable, because no bids were received for 120,000 shares of 5 per cent preferred stock which had been advertised as a piece of companion financing.

The Equitable bid of 104.015 was high and in accepting it belatedly today the company stated it would make new arrangements for bidding on the 120,000 shares of preferred, the interest rate on which has, meanwhile, been increased to 5¼ per cent with the permission of the State Public Service Commission.

Canadian Women To Join Defense Force Auxiliary

Ottawa, June 27 (AP)—The government today announced plans to bring thousands of women into auxiliary defense forces as light truck drivers, cooks, waitresses, stenographers and messengers for the army, and for similar jobs in the air force and the navy.

"Within the next six months, the "Canadian Women's Army Corps" will absorb 2,000 to 3,000 women to serve as full-time auxiliaries directed by Defense Minister J. L. Ralston. The navy and air force have not announced how many women will be needed, or exactly what jobs they will fill.

The women will enroll in the army corps under the same conditions as soldiers.

Some astute gentleman has remarked that everybody has something of the ham in him and secretly, or maybe not so secretly, thinks that if given the opportunity he could show those Barrymores and their ilk a thing or two about acting.

Well, here they are out at KNX, Columbia's Hollywood station, surrounded by the best actors in the country most of the week, and yet the employes still think they can show the professional thespians a thing or two.

The net result is that Charles Vanda, the program director for CBS on the West Coast, is going to give them their chance tomorrow, and you'll hear the results over WJSV at 4 p. m.

There'll be office boys, page boys, stenographers, script girls, janitors, people of both genders from the publicity department, males from the engineering department, mail clerks and what have you, taking part in the colossal experiment.

The production is to be known as "Young Ideas" and will feature two specially written stories, one called "Summer Evening," by True Boardman, and the other, "The Dude and the Desperado," by Ray Erlenborn.

No information comes through as to whether either of the scripts is intended as comedy. But if they should sound that way on the air, there is the large possibility that there was absolutely no such intention.

Contract Bridge

Sitting East, you hold these cards:

◇ K Q J 7 6
♣ 9 7 3 2

The bidding has gone:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

What is your opening lead?

Answer

Partner has bid hearts and then doubled three no trump, promising you he will defeat the contract if a heart is led. You should, therefore, lead partner's suit instead of your king of diamonds.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Cell Shock — BY MILTON CANIFF

WHAT'S THIS? WHY THE ARTILLERY?
YOU WERE OBSERVED AS YOU CHANGED IDENTITIES!
BUT HE SIMPLY WASHED HIS HAIR!
SO! WHY WAS THE HAIR BLACK?
WELL—IT WAS A SORT OF DISGUISE!
AH-HA!
BUT YOU CAN'T DO THIS TO US!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

THERE YOU ARE MRS. WORTH! YOU'RE NOW THE OWNER OF A HOTEL! I CONGRATULATE YOU!
THANKS, MR. SYKES--I HOPE I'LL BE ABLE TO RENT ENOUGH APARTMENTS TO MEET THE MORTGAGE PAYMENT--SIX MONTHS FROM NOW!
SHE HOPES SHE'LL EARN $3000 IN SIX MONTHS---FAT CHANCE, EH, MR. GRIBBLE?
FINE WORK--I THOUGHT SHE'D FALL FOR THAT FAKE OFFER I GOT JOE KOHLDECK TO MAKE YOU!
MARY WORTH! YOU'VE MADE A TERRIBLE BLUNDER!
IF YOU HADN'T GOT SO MAD AT THE THOUGHT OF THAT GAMBLER BUYING THE PROPERTY, YOU'D NEVER HAVE PLUNGED! LOSS OF TEMPER IS CERTAINLY LOSS OF SENSE!

DONALD DUCK — Me and My Shadow! — BY WALT DISNEY

MICKEY FINN — Hope! — BY LANK LEONARD

WHAT DO YOU WANT?
WE WANT TO TALK TO YOUR MOTHER, JOE! I CALLED THE HOSPITAL AND THEY SAID SHE WAS HERE!
LISTEN, IF YOU THINK I'M GOING TO LET YOU GET HER ALL UPSET BY TALKING ABOUT THAT BROTHER OF MINE, YOU CAN TAKE ANOTHER THINK!
JOE—WE THINK WE KNOW WHO KILLED STONEY HART—AND IT WASN'T TOMMY! —BUT WE'RE GOING TO NEED YOUR MOTHER'S HELP TO PROVE IT!
—AND WE WANT YOU TO COME WITH US TO MISS RING'S APARTMENT, MRS. TAPP—WE THINK YOU COULD GET HER TO TELL US WHAT SHE KNOWS!!
THEY'RE ONLY KIDDIN' THEMSELVES, MOM—AND YOU AIN'T STRONG ENOUGH TO GO!

MR. AND MRS. — No Vase Is Sacred — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

DIXIE DUGAN — Smart Men! — BY J. P. McEVOY AND R. J. STRIEBEL

IF IT WASN'T (PUFF-PUFF) THAT HIS LIFE WAS IN DANGER (GASP) I'D BE INCLINED TO LET (PUFF-PUFF) THAT BIG BOY BENSON KNOCK BUD HALE'S BLOCK OFF —
(GASP) SAVE YOUR BREATH, MICKEY (PUFF-PUFF)
HEY, BUD! LOOK! AREN'T THOSE THE TWO DAMES YOU KICKED OUT OF HERE A COUPLA DAYS AGO?
YEAH! WELL—I'LL—BE—SOME NERVE!
AW—THAT AIN'T NUTHIN' NEW—MY LIL' WOMAN ALWEEZ DOES TH' OPPOSITE OF WHAT I TELLS HER T'DO—THEY'RE ALL ALIKE
NOW LISTEN—I'M GOING OVER THE HILL AND HIDE! STALL THEM! TELL THEM ANYTHING BUT DON'T LET THEM GET BEYOND THIS POINT— GET IT?
O.K., BUD!
WE GOTCHA!
MEANWHILE IS IT ALL CLEAR, BIG BOY?
UH-HUH! I GIT'S HIM MAD—WE STARTS A FIGHT—I HIT HIM WIT DIS HUNK O'LEAD IN SELF DEFENST—IF HE CROAKS NUTTIN'LL HAPPEN T'ME 'CAUSE IT'S ALL ACCIDENTUL-LIKE!
BENSON, YOU'RE ACTUALLY SHOWING A SPARK OF INTELLIGENCE!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Just An Idea — BY FRANK MARTINEK

I HAVE A HUNCH YOUR THEORY IS RIGHT, ADMIRAL. THIS FOREIGN POWER, WHICH MUST REMAIN UNMENTIONED RIGHT NOW, IS PROBABLY USING MUSSLER'S SUPPLY OF PHONY PASSPORTS TO SLIP THEIR WAR AGENTS INTO THIS COUNTRY
WE MIGHT UNCOVER THE WHOLE PLOT IF—
IF WHAT, WINSLOW?
I WAS THINKING, SIR—IF WE COULD RING IN EXACTLY THE RIGHT AGENT OF OUR OWN—SUFFICIENTLY SKILLED IN COUNTERESPIONAGE
MM-M, SO THAT'S WHY YOU THOUGHT OF THAT LITTLE SPY, ASMARA!
SUE'S CLEVER ENOUGH, ADMIRAL. IF WE COULD GET HER ON OUR SIDE!
4-30 B

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

WATCH HIM, MISTER STEVE!
NATCHERLY, WE GOT TO TIDY UP TH' CABIN FER TH' WEDDIN' O' YE TWO! (AN AH GOTTA MAKE SURE BY LETTIN' THIS STOVE SLIP, THAT YE DON'T GIT NO RUNNIN' AWAY IDEES!)
SPEAKING OF WEDDINGS, I HAVE A PRESENT FOR MY "FUTURE FATHER-IN-LAW"— I'M GIVING YOU MY PLANE TO SELL FOR JUNK!
W-WHUT?
GOSH, MISTER STEVE! YE SHO' TOOK PAPPY OFF HIS FEET!
CRASH!

Roosevelt Asks Irish Pledge To Resist Nazis

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 27.—President Roosevelt warned Ireland today it must guarantee to defend itself in case of a German attack before the Irish will be allowed supplies of American war weapons.

The Chief Executive hinted, however, that the Irish might be allowed some rifles, but he immediately qualified this by adding that due to a critical production shortage the United States could not spare any ammunition to go with the rifles.

Mr. Roosevelt thus threw the weight of this country's prestige behind Great Britain's effort to wean Eire from its policy of strict neutrality.

Sitting shirtsleeved in the study of his family home here, where he is spending the weekend, the Chief Executive told a press conference that no assurances have been received from Eire that it would resist a German invasion.

While speaking freely about United States policy toward Ireland, the President was reticent about plans to aid Russia, new recruit to the anti-Axis camp.

In fact, Mr. Roosevelt indicated to a reporter that comments that his recent pledge of aid to the Soviet was "half-hearted" placed the Chief Executive in an uncomfortable position.

The reporter told the President that the Daily Worker, former official organ of the American Communist Party, has called the White House offer of help to Russia "half-hearted." The reporter further said that when Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles was asked for comment on these charges in Washington Thursday, Welles referred the question to the President.

In reply, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that he would refer the question in turn to the inquiring reporter and added that now the reporter was on the spot.

The Presidential remark was taken as an indication that his plans to implement his pledge to Russia have not yet crystallized, despite the fact that Soviet Ambassador Constantine A. Oumansky called to see Welles yesterday. Mr. Roosevelt said that later in the day he would confer with Welles, presumably about Oumansky's visit.

In his warning to Ireland, the President inserted a declaration that the United States has not broached to Irish Premier Eamon De Valera the question of making Irish bases available to Great Britain, a concession that the British have anxiously sought for months. The President also stated that he was quite sure that nothing has been said by the British about seizure of bases in Ireland.

Mr. Roosevelt said he was reasonably certain that this country is way behind in production of ammunition and needs the current output for itself.

He was under the impression, on the other hand, he said, that processing of rifles was getting along well and that there might be a small surplus that could be turned over to the Irish.

It appeared from the President's remarks, that with the possible exception of rifles, aid to Ireland would be limited to shipping and to supplies of food for the war refugees who have flocked there from Great Britain.

Some weeks ago the United States allowed Ireland to charter two ships here and buy one—a Yugoslavian vessel. In addition, Ireland was granted $500,000 worth of food through the cooperation of the Red Cross and the Agriculture Department. The ships, which the President said have not yet sailed, were to carry the gift food as well as any cargoes the Irish wanted to buy at their own expense. It was understood that the ships would take to Ireland goods that have been awaiting shipment for months due to a shortage of cargo space.

In answer to questions the President said he still had no idea whether Soviet Russia would be eligible for aid under the lease-lend law; he issued a second forecast that there eventually would be another request for a lease-lend appropriation to supplement the original $7,000,000,000 but avoided comment on a report that the size of the new request would be $5,000,000,000.

Houston Rites Will Be Held Here Today

Private funeral services will be held today for Andrew Jackson Houston, 87-year-old Texas Senator whose body is lying at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest. The Senator died Thursday after an operation.

After a requiem mass today the body will be placed in a receiving vault here, where it will lie for two or three months before being taken to Texas for final burial.

The Senate had planned to adjourn immediately yesterday out of respect to the Texan's memory, but the Senator's daughters, the Misses Ariadne and Margarite Houston, sent word that they preferred there be no interruption.

The Senate adopted a resolution expressing profound sorrow at the death. Named to a special committee to attend the mass were Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas; Truman (Democrat), of Missouri; Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico; Butler (Republican), of Nebraska, and Thomas (Republican), of Idaho.

No House committee was officially appointed, but Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, was expected to name all Texas members of Congress to a special honorary funeral group.

Funeral plans were announced by D. R. Potter, Houston's secretary, after he talked to the Senator's daughters and Chesley Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms.

A statement by Potter explaining postponement of taking the body to Texas said "The Misses Houston feel that the strain of a public funeral would be too much at this time and the Senator did not desire such a funeral. They will remain in Washington for a few days and then will go away for a rest before returning to La Porte."

Houston and the two sisters had been inseparable companions, said Mrs. Potter, wife of the secretary, adding that the daughters were grief-stricken.

Houston's successor is to be elected today.

Tydings Again Delays Action On Jackson

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Harlan Fiske Stone as Chief Justice of the United State, while Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, for the second time delayed subcommittee action on the appointment of Attorney General Jackson to the Supreme Court.

Senate approval of Stone's appointment came on a voice vote after a brief but dramatic speech by Senator Norris (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who voted against confirmation of Stone as an Associate Justice 16 years ago.

Reverses Opinion

"It is a great satisfaction for me today to vote for Justice Stone's elevation to Chief Justice and rectify the wrong I did him when I voted against his confirmation as an Associate Justice," Norris said.

"This vote gives me one of the greatest satisfactions of my public life," he added, "even though it may be of no importance to the Senate, or the country or Justice Stone himself."

Stone will be eligible to take the oath as Chief Justice any time after Tuesday, when the retirement of Charles Evans Hughes takes effect.

Meanwhile a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee continued hearings on the Jackson nomination until Monday when Senator Tydings, who had once before asked to be heard on the appointment, again failed to appear before the subcommittee.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, subcommittee chairman, said he had been notified that Tydings would find it more convenient to testify Monday but went ahead with a hearing yesterday because two other witnesses wished to be heard.

Tydings has not divulged the nature of the statement he wishes to make before the committee and has not announced definitely that he is opposing the nomination.

Yesterday's witnesses, both opposing confirmation, were Robert C. McManus, editor of the New Jersey Voter, published in Newark, and Lester P. Barlow, inventor, who has been involved in controversy with the Government over payment for patents used during the World War.

Hatch and Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, showed irritation several times during the testimony by McManus. Hatch told the witness:

"What you are implying is that Attorney General Jackson made a trade with Mayor Hague to drop charges of alleged civil liberties violations in return for Hague's support of a third term for President Roosevelt."

McManus replied that he was "raising that question" for consideration by the subcommittee. O'Mahoney told him, "The truth of the matter is that you are attacking Mayor Hague and using this committee as a sounding board. You have said nothing about the issue before us."

Barlow contended that opinions written by Jackson had been used to delay payment of half of the $800,000 settlement for Government use of his patents which Congress voted him last year.

Gen. Van Horn, 64, Dies in Hospital On West Coast

Brig. Gen. Robert O. Van Horn, U. S. A., retired, who worked his way from a buck private to one of the highest ranks in the Army, is dead at the age of 64. The War Department said that the officer died last Thursday at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco.

Gen. Van Horn was born at Whipple Barracks, Ariz., and enlisted in the Army in 1897. Soon after the outbreak of the Spanish War, he was ordered to Cuba where he participated in engagements at El Caney, San Juan and Santiago de Cuba.

Gen. Van Horn was a member of the War Department General Staff here in 1914. He served in France with distinction during the first World War and was promoted to rank of brigadier general June 30, 1934. He is survived by his widow, who lives in Monterey, Calif.

President Acts To Halt Rumor In Texas Vote

By James Drummond
United Press Staff Writer

Dallas, Tex., June 27.—President Roosevelt, who personally indorsed Representative Lyndon Johnson as his man in the United States Senate race for a successor to the late Morris Sheppard, tonight denounced as "preposterous" Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel's plan for a Texas army, navy and air force.

In a telegram to Johnson from his home in Hyde Park, Mr. Roosevelt said he acted to spike rumors that he had indorsed the Governor in the race.

It was the President's first direct part in the 2-month-old campaign and came on the eve of a special election in which 25 candidates seek Sheppard's place. Four—O'Daniel, Johnson, United States Representative Martin Dies and State's Attorney General Gerald Mann—were favored and the closest race in Texas election history was predicted.

"I have read stories in the past few days seeking to make it appear that I have given some kind of indorsement to the plan proposed by the Governor of Texas to create a Texas army and navy for the protection of one portion of our southern border against invasion," Mr. Roosevelt stated in his telegram.

"My reply to the Governor was intended to be merely courteous, thus avoiding calling the scheme preposterous, which it undoubtedly is. Obviously national defense means national defense and not piecemeal defense by localities.

"I am only sending this telegram because it has been reported here that my reply to the Governor is in some strange way being construed as an indorsement of his candidacy."

Johnson read the telegram at the end of a radio speech made here.

The Governor himself had revealed his correspondence with Mr. Roosevelt regarding an independent military establishment for Texas, as though it still were a republic. He had quoted Mr. Roosevelt as declining politely, describing the proposal as "breathtaking."

The winner of tomorrow's special election will take a post twice vacated in the last 11 weeks by death. Sheppard died April 5. Last night, interim Senator Andrew Jackson Houston, 87-year-old appointee of O'Daniel, succumbed at Baltimore after an abdominal operation.

Young G.O.P. In Permanent Organization

By the Associated Press

The young Republican National Federation was organized on a permanent functional basis for the first time yesterday when its executive committee named John M. Robsion, Jr., of Louisville, Ky., as executive secretary.

Robsion is a son of Representative Robsion, of Kentucky. Ralph E. Becker, of Port Chester, N. Y., was named general counsel, and Richard Nowinson, of Chicago, publicity director.

National offices will be opened in Chicago. Heretofore the young Republicans have been active only in campaign years. The appointment of the three officers is expected by party leaders to signalize the start of organization and other activities between elections as well.

Gordon Allott, of Lamar, Colo., head of the Young Republicans, declared at the end of a two-day meeting of the national organization's executive committee that a "thorough and well-coordinated program" would begin at once and would be carried through the 1942 Congressional campaign.

Representative Ditter, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, told the committee the Nation's young men and women could help preserve the representative form of government by working for a larger Republican House next year.

The Young Republicans adopted a program for the next two years covering organization, first voters, publicity, labor, college clubs, Negro activities and special racial and interest groups.

Conrad Miller Will Be Buried This Afternoon

Funeral services for Conrad Miller, 65-year-old Spanish War veteran who died Thursday, will be held at his home, 907 Fourteenth Street Southeast, at 3 p. m. today.

Veterans of the Richard J. Harden Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, will attend the funeral. Mr. Miller will be buried in the Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Miller was born in Germany and came to this country at the age of 16. He had lived in Washington since 1902, and had been retired from a post at the Navy Yard. He had been under doctors' care for about a year. He leaves his wife, Lena Miller; a son, Henry C. Miller, and a daughter, Margaret H. Miller, all of this city.

Capt. Bensinger Dies at 59 After 3 Weeks' Illness

Capt. Charles Bensinger, U. S. A., retired, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital after an illness of three weeks. He was 59.

A native of Auburn, Pa., Capt. Bensinger was a guard for the National Park Service at the time of his death. During the World War he served in France, participating in the Battles of the Argonne and Verdun.

His wife, Mrs. Dora V. Bensinger; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Caviness, and a son, Robert Bensinger, all of Washington, survive. Funeral services will be held Monday at 9 a. m. in the chapel at Fort Myer, Va. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

OPM Asks Auto Output Be Cut 20% More

A further cut in passenger car and truck production, in addition to the 20 per cent curtailment recommended on May 3, was called for last night by John D. Biggers, OPM production chief.

The extent of the further production was not announced.

At the same time, members of the House Ways and Means Committee disclosed that the Treasury had recommended a 15 per cent tax on automobiles for the double purpose of raising revenue and curtailing production.

Biggers' announcement declared the additional limitation was necessary "because of shortages in critical materials and because the resources of the industry are needed increasingly in the national defense program.

Calls Meeting

The production chief made public telegrams to all auto manufacturers asking them to meet here next Wednesday to select a defense industry advisory committee—provided for as industry representatives in the recent reorganization of OPM Administration—to help the Government in working out the details of the cut.

A special objective, Biggers said, would be to time the reduction "to minimize dislocations which might result in wasteful shutdowns and large-scale unemployment."

Although a further reduction had been generally anticipated, its call last night came as a surprise, largely because it was believed the OPM would allow more time for the application of the earlier 20 per cent limitation. Both cuts will apply to production of 1942 models, beginning August 1.

At a recent press conference, Defense Chief William S. Knudsen had indicated that the further cut would be delayed. He noted his fears that additional reductions, made before the defense program had "built up" to take care of displaced workers, might precipitate a serious unemployment problem.

Tax Proposal Draws Fire

The Treasury proposal for a tax to limit auto production stirred heated debate in the committee, it was reported. The recommendation came as something of a surprise because the Treasury had originally proposed doubling the present 3½ per cent tax on sales of new cars. The proposed 7 per cent levy was estimated at that time to produce almost $80,000,000 of revenue.

The Treasury proposal constituted a compromise on suggestions of Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Marriner Eccles that the tax on autos be increased to 20 or 25 per cent.

There was no immediate indication of the committee's attitude toward the Treasury plan.

Dallas Paper Wins Ruling In Wage Case

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, June 27.—The Fifth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today held that the time that newspaper editors and news-gatherers must work is "very variable and unpredictable" in affirming a ruling in favor of the Dallas News in a wage-and-hour case involving method of paying employes.

The court held it was "difficult to make a fair working agreement based on hours worked by newspapermen."

The action was considered of vital importance to the newspaper business because Wage-Hour Administrator Philip B. Fleming recently said the decision in the United States District Court at Dallas, if allowed to stand, "would largely destroy Section 7, of the 40-hour week, which has done so much to increase employment in this period of increasing production."

The wage-and-hour division appealed from the ruling of Judge William H. Atwell on February 19 that firms paying wages or salaries equal to or in excess of the Labor Standards Act requirements were in compliance with the law, regardless of method of pay used.

"When things are quiet a few hours a day may suffice," today's opinion held. "In times of news activity a 12-hour-day may be required. It is practically difficult to make a fair working agreement based on hours worked."

Bryson Lewis, 15, Dies Here After 3-Month Illness

Bryson M. Lewis, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton I. Lewis, died yesterday at his home, 1118 K Street Northwest, after an illness of three months.

A student at Stuart Junior High School, young Lewis was born and reared in Washington. In addition to his parents, he leaves two brothers, Joseph R. and Thomas F. Lewis, and a sister, Margaret H. Lewis, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held from the residence on Tuesday, July 1, at Holy Name Church at 9 a. m., with interment at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

U. S. Contracts for 3 Temporary Buildings

The Public Buildings Administration yesterday announced award of a $498,000 contract to McCloskey & Co. of Philadelphia for construction of three temporary buildings in the Northwest rectangle, facing the new War Department Building.

Designated Buildings F, G and H, the two-story, asbestos-front structures will accommodate a total of 1,200 workers and provide 110,000 square feet of space. They are to be completed within 75 days.

J. D. Osbourne, Aide to Senator, Dies in New York

John D. Osbourne, secretary to Senator W. Warren Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, died Thursday in Roosevelt Hospital, New York City, it was learned here yesterday.

A former newspaperman, publicity manager for Senator Barbour's first campaign for the Senate and campaign manager for the New Jersey Senator in his latest election fight, Mr. Osbourne was a native of Cranford, N. J.

Describing the loss of his secretary as "irreparable," Senator Barbour said last night, "He was more like a dearly loved son or younger brother than a secretary. No one can ever take his place. We are all greatly saddened by his sudden passing. His memory will never fade, and we will miss him always."

Mr. Osbourne, who was 42, was stricken with a heart attack four weeks ago at his home in Loch Arbor, N. J., and was brought to the New York hospital a week later.
